ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It was nearly a decade and a half ago that I first thought of exploring the subject of this Thesis. I acknowledge this in the body of this Thesis in Footnote 21 on page 10. It has been growing on me since and, inter alia, led me to do a series of case studies for a magazine and a newspaper.

My feelings and approach to the subject of this Thesis are axiomatic from the fact that each and every letter and word and punctuation mark in this work has been personally typed by me.

If there is even a shard of worth in the present work it is not due to me, but an ode to human thought and endeavours already made in this regard. I have always been of the view that nothing we do is original, and I mean this in the purest sense of the word. Everything is just there, waiting to be explored and discovered, since only Nature is original. This Thesis, in this sense, is dedicated to Nature and all its manifestations.

All the same, I am grateful to all the people who became associated with this magnum opus, whether directly or indirectly, and without whose assistance and support it would not have become possible. Foremost amongst these persons are my late Parents, to whom I owe so much; my wife and children who bore with me throughout the writing of this Thesis; my two esteemed and learned Supervisors from the Department of Laws, Panjab University, Chandigarh, namely, Professor V.K.Bansal and Professor M.S.Bains, who also helped me polish the rough edges and remove the grime from this work; all my friends and colleagues in the profession of law and outside, and everyone else who consciously or subconsciously imparted me knowledge on the issue of Reconceptualizing Sovereignty of States in the context of Foreign Intervention in the Era of Globalization.
