ACKNOWLEDGMENT

This modest effort of the investigator is made possible because of the blessings of the masters in the field of music. The investigator is deeply indebted to Dr. N. Vedamani Manuel, Retired Professor and Head of the Department of Education, University of Kerala for guiding the present research, for the inspiration given and for the help rendered. But for him the final report would not have been completed and the investigator feels sincerely that words can not adequately express her indebtedness to the great Professor who is one of the leading lights in the field of Education. He was helpful for taking references from French and Russian books.

The investigator would like to offer her thanks to all the top ranking musicians whom she interviewed to elicit information on music. Special mention must be made of the following experts on music who enlarged her knowledge: Sarva Sri B.V. Raman and B.V. Lakshmanan for their paternal help, T.N. Thiagarajan a musician and expert teacher of music, Thiruvengadu A. Jeyaraman for his inspiring guidance, T.K. Govinda Rao, a renowned producer of music which reaches the level of consumers, G.S. Mani for his illuminating ideas, T.V. Gopalakrishnan who readily shared his views both as a vocalist and mridangist, T.N. Seshagopalan for his friendly advice and help, the maestro violinists T.N. Krishnan, M.S.Gopalakrishnan Lalgudi G. Jayaraman and B. Sasikumar for their guidance and Erode A. Gururajan for his suggestions and ideas as a laya expert, Dr. Prapancham Sitaram for his valuable suggestions and Dr. M. Balamuralikrishna for his forth right expression of views on music and music education. Many other names of musicians have not been mentioned for want of space but the investigator offers her thanks and regards to all of them. The dialogue with music education researches in Kerala like Sri. Venugopu and Kumari P.E. Chandrakumari was most stimulating.

The investigator is deeply grateful to the musicians of Tamil Nadu Government Music College, Madras, Music Department, Annamalai University, the Music Academy, Madras, Tharanginisari, Trivandrum, Swati Tirunal College of Music, Trivandrum and several other music teaching institutions for their valuable suggestions and for allowing her to observe the activities of their schools.
The investigator sincerely offers her thanks to all the music teachers in music schools in Tamil Nadu and Kerala. Special mention must be made of the C.E.O.'s and D.E.O.'s of the region who made it possible for the investigator to visit the schools.

The investigator will be failing in her duty if she does not acknowledge the help rendered by Professor N. Viswanathan, Professor S. Ramakrishnan, Professor P. Sankaran, Professor K. Pazhaniapillai for their valuable advice her husband Mr. S. Srinivasan and her brothers who have been a source of strength to her throughout the period of this research.

No words can express adequately the debt the investigator owes her father-in-law the late Professor A. Srinivasa Raghavan who first put her on the way to a serious approach to music, literature, philosophy and the broad concept of religion which laid the foundation for this research. She must also thank Mrs. Chudamani, her mother-in-law whose sacrifice and interest made it possible for the investigator to devote time for music and music education.

Lastly she would like to thank Dr. Pushpita John, present Dean, and Head of the Department of Education, for her help and encouragement. The help of the library, office staff of the Department and the typist who executed this job is also gratefully acknowledged.
