ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Police Personnel Management has been my favourite subject. The turning point in my life and after 2 decades of career came in during the Eighties when I secured third rank in Madras University in M.B.A. and a senior Police Officer happened to remark that my next task should be an in-depth study of personality. Fired with a zeal, I embarked upon a difficult subject which has now been completed and presented as my thesis.

Gratitude would be an inadequate expression if I were to say so, for all those who helped me in arriving at certain definite findings in the field of behavioural sciences and in identifying the socio-economic factors and personality traits of different types of constabulary.

I am extremely grateful to Professor Thiagarajan, Head, Department of Management Sciences, Pondicherry University who has been my guide, friend and philosopher and who had spent months together offering me his invaluable guidance supervision help and encouragement throughout my research work. But for his deep commitment to see to my completion of my work inspite of all my pre-occupation this work would not have been achieved.

I am also grateful to another Scholar of great repute Dr. P. Rama Rao, Professor of Psychology (Retd.) University of Madras. Even if I happen to slow down my work, he was always there to push me and make me accomplish the attempt. The difficult subject was made very easy by his constant advice and guidance.
The present work involved collection of huge lot of material from various districts and interacting with hundreds. In this process, a number of District Superintendents of Police and other Police Officers have helped me. A special reference need to be made of Mr. Murugavel and Mr. Rajagopal who spent a lot of time and energy helping me in analysing the data that was collected from the district and getting it processed for statistical analysis and data computerisation.

My special thanks are due to my assistant Mr. S. Jayaganesan who had meticulously taken down my notes and who had produced the same in a neat manner unmindful of the volume of work involved. I have lost a count of the number of hours he would have spent with me in this work, but I do remember his smiling face whenever he was entrusted with this work.

I also wish to record my heart-felt gratitude with deep sense of sincerity to the various authors whose literature were of great help to me and gave me an insight into the subject.

My sincere thanks are due to all the respondents of my research study who whole-heartedly co-operated with me and faithfully answered all the questions of the interview schedule and also took the Personality test administered to them.

I thank Mr. M. Saravanan, M.Sc., M.Phil, of Computer Plus, Madras, for computerising the data in accordance with requirements specified by me.
I am also thankful to Mr. Mukesh D. Shah of Classic Creations, Madras - 600 010, who got the entire material printed for me in a presentable manner.

It is quite possible that there are many others including my family members whose names do not appear here but who have been very helpful to me. My family's contribution in furthering this dream of mine is beyond measure. Silently they have suffered and cheerfully endured life's mundane musing with me.

R. RAJAGOPALAN