ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Four years back, when I embarked upon this journey, I couldn’t have imagined what an exhilarating ride it would turn out to be. Now at the penultimate stop on this voyage, I am making an attempt to look back at this period, to remember with gratitude all those who helped me reach here.

Dr. Suman Karandikar agreed to guide me during this research in spite of her decision to primarily focus on working alongside high school teachers. This in itself was a good beginning and during these years, I learnt a lot from her. Her mastery over various facets of research methodology was known to me and there were many occasions validating that knowledge. Her ability to see and think beyond boundaries and continual quest to expand the learning horizons proved to be the major factors enriching me as a person, researcher and teacher.

She always had an open mind policy for any thought, discussion and suggestion. She helped me find my bearings as a researcher by her clarity of thought process, proactive sharing of books, journals from her personal collection, minute observations, appreciative nature and incessant reminder of the fact that research is a journey; not a destination. Her attitude towards constraints and her passion for learning always proved to be contagious enough for me to forget my occasional frustrations and lethargy.

In more ways than one, ‘creativity’ is a slippery topic which has enormous potential to make the researcher think astray. Working alongside Dr. Karandikar; I learnt to curb this instinct. She made me realise the existence of the larger picture, space occupied by my topic in that picture and at the same time not to lose focus of the micro level factors, concepts which ultimately create the large picture. She also stressed the importance of continuous checking and alignment of the analysis of the concepts, issues against the rationale. Before I started this, I had a habit of jumping to conclusions too early. I also had some very rigid presumptions. These past years with Dr. Karandikar taught me to question myself, question my presumptions and do it repeatedly. This attitudinal change helped me to get clarity on my role as a researcher.

Her passion for the subject, affection for students and exacting standards for research quality led to a relaxed bond between us which proved to be a major source of inspiration and support during this research journey. I will always be grateful for that.

Thanks to the Teacher Fellowship awarded to me by western region authorities of UGC; I could fully concentrate on this research work. I would like to mention with gratitude; Secretary, G.E. Society, Dr. M.S. Gosavi and the then Principal Dr. B.D. Deodikar for their kind gesture of allowing me to opt for this fellowship. I would like to thank Dr. D.V. Kulkarni (former Head of Department), Dr. S.A. Sonawane (current Head of Department), all staff and librarians of Department of Education, University of Pune for their help in various aspects.

Principal, D.Ed College, Sangamner granted me permission to conduct the pilot experimentation of ‘Test on Creativity in Teaching’ and ‘A programme for enhancement of creativity in teaching’. I conducted the surveys in 16 B.Ed Colleges under University of Pune. I acknowledge with thanks the co-operation offered by these institutions and their staff. The programme was implemented also for some high school teachers in Sangamner. I offer my thanks to these teachers and also to the head of R.D. Malpani Vidyalaya for kindly agreeing to participate in the program implementation. I would also like to thank Principal, B.Ed College, and Sangamner for granting me access to classroom and other resources and to thank the teaching and administrative colleagues with a special mention of librarian for their cooperation. During this period, apart from the ones mentioned above, I made use of library facilities of various institutions like SCERT, SNDT, IIE, and Jnanaprabodhini. I am thankful to these institutions and their staff. I wish to express gratitude towards those member colleagues of ‘Aapanach’ with whom I had discussions, interactions during course of this study. Thanks to Seema Bokil for her efficient typing.

This remembrance deserves a special place for the student teachers of B.Ed. College, Sangamner (of year 2004-05). I will always fondly cherish the radiant moments spent with these students during experimentation.

I always counted on my family members to be the fellow travelers during this voyage. It is difficult for me to express my feelings in words about them.
