"Not everything that counts can be counted, and not everything that can be counted, counts." - Albert Einstein.

If I had a magic wand, these pages would glow - lit by gratitude and appreciation - for all those who have made my journey easier and this destination nearer. "Thank you" is indeed a small phrase that can only just begin to say all that I feel. The persons mentioned here and many more who are not, have been instrumental in shaping this work and helping me to proceed from darkness to light   tamaso ma jyotir gamayah   vers la lumiere

I thank my Research Guide Dr. M. Basheer Ahmed Khan, Professor, School of Management, for being an example of determination and discipline and standing by me through many trying times during the phase of this research and always pushing me on to higher levels of academic performance. This work would not have even started but for his unswerving support and encouragement.

I thank Dr. R. Sambasiva Rao, Director, JIPMER, the Co-Guide for this study, for his keen interest and commitment, unstinted encouragement, and professional and insightful contributions whenever needed throughout the period of this research. He willingly gave a lot of his time for discussing all aspects of the study.

A doctoral research work has intrinsic motivational values to the researcher. However, a Management Research Workshop organized by the Indian Institutes of Management, Ahmedabad, Bangalore and Calcutta, in April 1999, at the IIM, Calcutta, jointly with the Aditya Birla Centre, London Business School, London, U.K. acted as a tremendously inspirational experience. My sincere thanks to Professors Dr. Anup K Sinha (IIM, Calcutta, India) and Dr. Arvind Sahay (LBS, London, UK) for organizing the best workshop that I have ever attended in my professional life. The opportunity of having our research proposals evaluated by the "Vasishtas" of Management - Dr. Subroto Sengupta (IIMC, India) and Dr. Vijay Mahajan (University of Texas, USA) - was something that I will treasure for their forthright and incisive comments and suggestions for improvement. I salute them.

I thank the Aditya Birla Centre at the London Business School, London, UK for the Award of their Doctoral Research Grant based on the evaluation of my research proposal during the workshop. The Award has funded this study to a substantial extent.

Thanking the Vice Chancellor might normally seem a formal gesture attributed to the hierarchy, but in my case it is a sincere expression of gratitude and appreciation for a person who always remembered to inquire about my progress and wished me Godspeed in the successful completion of the research. By his own example of hard work and long working hours, Prof. Dr. V. T. Patil, Vice Chancellor, Pondicherry University, has inspired the same energy in my efforts.

I thank the Director and all the Members of the Research Council of JIPMER for granting approval and permission to conduct this study at the JIPMER Hospital. My thanks to the Medical Superintendent of the hospital Dr. S. Badrinath and the Dean Dr. Ashok Kumar Das for permission to access the hospital records, and interview inpatients and employees as a part of the study. Their helpful attitude and prompt attention ensured a smooth atmosphere for conducting the study.

My thanks are due to Dr. A. K. Ananthakrishnan, Director-Professor and Head, Dept. of Surgery, for sparing a lot of his time and sharing his expertise and views during the various phases of this study. I also thank Dr. K. R. Sethuraman, Professor of Medicine and Head, Dept. of Medical Education, for giving a direction for the literature search and sharing the wealth of research papers and articles from his personal collection.

Thanks to the Chief Nursing Officer Mrs. G. David and the Nursing Tutors Sister Vijayal and Brother Ramesh, the doors of the Nursing personnel were opened for this study. Their efforts to arrange interfaces with groups of nurses for the purpose of this study and the readiness of the nursing staff to respond will be ever remembered with gratefulness.

A big "Thank You" to all the Consultants of JIPMER who spared their time and gave their unswerving co-operation during my repeated meetings with them in the midst of their busy workdays despite my not fixing up any prior appointments with them. My study would have been the poorer had it not been for their generosity in inducting me into their field of work. Thanks to many of the Senior Residents and Medical Officers for their help in identifying the patients and wards. Thanks to Dr. Brian Martis for sending some research articles from the US.

I thank Dr. S. Gunasekaran, Professor and Head, Dept. of Sociology, Pondicherry University, for helping me overcome a state of 'researcher's nerves' during the initial phase of this study. His empathy and counsel were extremely beneficial at a stressful time. Thanks to Dr. Sham Bhat, Professor and Head, Dept. of Economics, Pondicherry University, for his encouragement and thoughtful reminders of the importance of doctoral research work as a window of opportunity in the world of academics.

My thanks to all my colleagues in the School of Management and friends in other departments of the Pondicherry University for their good wishes and words of inspiration.

I thank the then Assistant Librarian Mr. K. Jayaraman and staff Mr. Nirmalanandan of JIPMER Library for allowing access to the journals and CD-ROM database. I also thank the Librarian Mr. Chikmallaiah and Mrs. Neela of the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore for permitting access to the journals, CD-ROM search services and other resources and going the extra mile in sending by courier the additional materials requested for from the IIIMB library. Thanks to Mr. V. Balasubramanian, Medical Records Officer cum Tutor of JIPMER for making available the necessary statistical records of patients and services of the hospital.

My admiration and thanks to M/s Integra and M/s Advika Ads, Pondicherry, for being so tolerant of my demands and executing the production and design of the thesis with great attention to detail and an eye on perfection. I thank Ms. Anuradha Sriram and Mr. Sriram Subramanya, the JMD and MD of Integra for their great standards of customer care and ensuring a very conducive climate for customers to interact with their managers and staff. A special Thank You to Mr. M. Subramanian, Manager, and Mr. S. Sambath Kumar, Graphic Artist, Advika Ads for being very generous with their time and also sharing much of their knowledge of word processing and formatting that will be a permanent value-addition to my skills set.
My admiration and thanks to my husband Dr. R. Chandrasekaran, Professor and Head, Dept. of Psychiatry, JIPMER, for sharing his knowledge of social science research methods and completely guiding me through the statistical analysis for this study. My thanks straight from the heart, to my daughter Priyanka, who with all the wisdom of her nine years, understood the pressures on my time and took the back seat throughout the duration of my research work. My thanks to my father Dr. S. Dandapani, Professor of Education (Retd.), Regional College of Education, Mysore (National Council of Educational Research and Training), who has always been and continues to be a symbol of dedication to his profession, for deeply imprinting his values on us. I thank my parents and parents-in-law for being so supportive and encouraging with their prayers, blessings and good wishes.

This study is dedicated to all those patients of JIPMER who not only shared their views but also gave their heartfelt blessings, as one would bless a member of the family. They taught me lessons in endurance and optimism and opened my eyes to the harsh realities faced by a medical professional. Every one of their faces will be etched in my memory not merely for their contribution to this study that will be a milestone in my professional career, but also for realizing the superior value of human emotions over mere reason in the larger canvas of life.

Pondicherry,
