The present study was carried out under the expert supervision of Dr. Tanmay Bhattacharjee, Reader in the Department of Political Science, Assam University, Silchar. I express my gratitude to Sri Mrinal Kanti Chakraborty, an ex-surveillance Inspector, National Malaria Eradication, who, having lived long in proximity with the Barmans in his service life, was able to help me a lot in the work.

I am also grateful to the villagers whom I met and who provided me with the useful pieces of information during the field visits undertaken by me. I am also indebted to the officers and other staff of the National Library, Calcutta, The District Library of Cachar, Silchar, Women's College Library, Silchar, Assam University Library, The Tribal Development Project, Silchar and the State Library of Assam at Guwahati, for their kind co-operation and help.

During the last four years, I came across a considerable number of persons who have helped me directly or indirectly in the present work. I wish to express to them my gratefulness from the core of my heart.

The expert's reports on my final thesis certainly boosted my confidence. Some of their observations were in reality a kind of guidance to me.

I also feel it necessary to convey my heartiest thanks to my colleagues, my teachers, elder and younger brothers and sisters, the non-teaching staff of the Women's College, the teaching and non-teaching staff of the Assam University for the help received from them directly or indirectly in various ways from time to time.
I am specially grateful to Dr. Tanmay Bhattacharjee, my guide, for his kind and whole-hearted help, guidance and encouragement. I sincerely express my heartfelt felicitations and thanks to him. I am further grateful to the Registrar, Dr. R. Bhattacharjee, Dr. P. Debnath, Incharge of the Controller of Examination, Dr. P. R. Bhattacharjee, Professor of Economics, Dr. S. Kar, Professor of Bengali, Dr. S. Rao, Professor of Sociology, Dr. R. K. Dey, Reader of History and Dr. Dilip Kumar Mahanta, Department of Philosophy, all at Assam University, Silchar for the helps I received from them.

I owe a debt to Prof. J. K. Samal, Dean, School of Social Sciences, Assam University, Silchar, for the counsels, he offered me from time to time. His words had soothing effects on my work and me also.

My thanks also go to Sarbani Roy Choudhury, Sarita Bhattacharjee, Tripti Paul Choudhury and Sanjeeb Deb Laskar all of whom have provided me with valuable help.

I have also to express my gratefulness to my husband, Dr. M.K. Datta Chowdhury whose active encouragement and help enabled me to complete my work.

The Assam University office Assistants attached to the department of Political Science Sri Abdul Hannan had helped me by typing out initial draft of the thesis. My thank goes to him.

The two kids, my sons Mandeep and Shubhodeep also deserves to be thanked for the way they bore with missing their mother's attention but did not cease to be a source of joy for me.
I also express my thanks to Mrs. Chaya Rani Roy, the lady aide of my house who helped by keeping me undisturbed and freedom from the domestic problems, thus enabling me to complete my work with sound and peaceful mind.

Last but not the least, I am very much thankful to Mr. Siddhartha Sankar Paul, for composing this thesis paper with modus, flexible and renovate ideas, and Bhubaneswar Nath for typing so neatly and helping me throughout this total work, under Softcore Programmer Consultant, Rangirkhari, Silchar.
