ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my pleasant duty, at the very outset, to place on record the debt of gratitude which I have incurred while engaged in the studies which have led to the preparation of this thesis.

First and foremost among those to whom I am indebted is my learned Supervisor, Professor (Mrs.) Nirmal Makerjee, Head and Chairman, Department of English, Panjab University, Chandigarh. I do not know what to praise more -- the breadth of her scholarship or the depth of her humanity. The ideal Supervisor is not merely "... a rod

To check the erring, and reprove"

but also a "guide, philosopher, and friend", an inspiring presence, who silently but continuously exercises a benevolent influence to reform and refine, to encourage and elevate. I was fortunate in having just such an ideal Supervisor, and the three-odd years spent in working under the close direction and stewardship of Mrs. Makerjee will be remembered as the pleasantest and most rewarding among my academic years.

My thanks are also due to the Librarians and staff of those libraries -- especially the Panjab University Library at Chandigarh, the Panjab University Extension Library at Ludhiana, the Punjabi University library at Patiala, and the Central State Library at Chandigarh -- whose reading and research facilities were utilised.

I must also mention my thankfulness to all members of the English Department of Panjab University, including the non-teaching staff from whom, throughout the tenure of my UGC Fellowship, I always received due courtesy and co-operation.

Yashpal Kaur

Chandigarh