ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Although an acknowledgement appears in the beginning of a thesis or a book, it is always written last, perhaps the reason is that one has to count the help of the operators of word processor, binder and many others in the successful launching of a work of this type.

This thesis is on a very micro subject and it tries to probe deep into it. This task was made easy by Dr. S.R.Ijari, my guide, who gave me enough free-hand and provided timely advice, where necessary. Working with him was a mission. Many of the things I have learnt from him during these two years period go beyond the pages of this thesis. A plain 'thanks' may not do any justice. I shall ever be grateful to him.

Prof. K.S.Deshpande has carefully read through this thesis when it was in the manuscript stage. I was obsessed by the charms of brevity in writing; no wonder, the first draft was in 'telegraphic language', to say the least. Prof. Deshpande gave polish to the language and the contents of this thesis. My sittings with him have given me assets for my future. I shall always remember his help. Dr. M.A.Gopinath (DRTC), Prof. B.V.Rajashekhar, Dr. C.R.Karisiddappa (Karnataka University), Prof. A.C.Tikekar, Ms. S.A.Madiman, Mr. Murudeswar (University of Bombay) have had their significant role in the making of this thesis. They have all listened to me patiently and offered suggestions. This thesis has passed through their transparent support.

A special mention must be made to the favour given by Dr. A.V. Patankar, Director, Western Regional Instrumentation Centre (WRIC) Bombay, where I am working since two months. During these two months, I have shamelessly requested for six days leave, and he has graciously granted it. I am touched by his gesture.

There are many people who have directly or indirectly helped in the completion of this work. The librarians of various libraries I have consulted, the computer personnel, friends, colleagues, well, the list is endless. There is an old fable about a battle which was lost for the want of just one nail. Today, I remember all of these who gave me those crucial nails, horse-shoes, horses and above all, a purpose for this battle. I am grateful to all these friends.
