ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is most important to remove the poverty of the people of this state, for this more detailed planning has to be made. If cost of the projects give real benefit, then only the poor people can prosper in this land which has immense potential for irrigation. The prosperity of this land due to irrigation, will pave the way for industrial and all round development of this area.

It is said that true knowledge is not possible without a Guru who inculcates the zest for knowledge in the student, understands his/her weaknesses, lends a helping hand to overcome them and boosts up the plus points. My feelings lack proper words to express my deep gratitude towards my guide Dr. K.K. Bindal Professor and Head Department of Economics and co-guide Dr. V.K Joshi Professor and Head Department of Economics, for the guidance, support and help they gave me in the course of my research. They judged my passion for irrigation and helped me choose a topic of my interest. There deep insight into the subject, their friendly and supportive nature, their incessant motivation for the work and their confidence in me, encouraged me to dedicate myself to the cause with a strong determination. Every time when I was stuck up on a point and we differed in opinion, they very logically guided me through to the right track. I extend my hearty thanks to them for all the help and efforts that they have made for the completion of this work.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my thanks and gratitude to the Principal- Dr. Arvind Girolkar and Dr. Aruna Palta, Who kindled the desire of research in me. Their constant motivation, support and guidance inspired me to devote myself in the pursuit of the research
