ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Recognition must be given to all the people who assisted me in the completion of this research work. Otherwise it is a professional selfishness. A number of people from different walks of life have made valuable contribution, encouragement and support in the completion of this research work.

My deepest and profound gratitude to my research Supervisor Dr. G.P. Parsain, Associate Professor, Department of Commerce, Manipur University for his relentless devotion, dedication, guidance, and constant encouragement through thick and thin of this research work without losing confidence on me. His visit to the North Eastern Coalfields, Assam, for this research was indeed a morale booster and encouragement.

My sincere thanks to Prof. N. Mohindro, Department of Economics, Manipur University for his encouragement and support.

Dr. K. I. Meetei, Faculty Member of Institute of Cooperative Management, Imphal deserves my special gratitude and thanks for his expertise and generous assistance. I am especially indebted to him for his helping attitude and professional guidance as and when situation demand was most remarkable. He is an asset to the organisation considering his potential and eagerness for academic persuasion.

My heartfelt thanks and gratitude to Shri P. Bapu Singh, Faculty Member, Institute of Cooperative Management Imphal for his cheerful assistance and support without any reservation. His professional expertise, a rare quality of keeping his words and accept academic challenge from such a young professional is very encouraging and a matter of rejoice to interact.
I would also like to extend my thanks to Shri S.K. Hota, Faculty Member, RICM Chandigarh for his valuable contributions and assistance.

My gratitude goes to Shri S. Bijoy, Shri Bharat Singh and Shri Dhananjoy for their assistance and help in the data processing.

I would also like to thank all the teaching and non-teaching staffs of Institute of Cooperative Management, Imphal, who all made this Institute proud, for their encouragement and providing a congenial academic atmosphere throughout this research period.

I wish to express my deep gratitude to Dr. Sheela Bora, Department of History, Dibrugarh University for her encouragement as a scholar and providing me valuable tips and rare books for reference.

I would like to acknowledge gratitude to librarians and Staffs of various institutes namely Dibrugarh University, Ranchi University, Manipur University, Coal Mine Planning and Development Institute Ranchi, Central Coal Fields Ltd. Ranchi, Indian Institute of Coal Management, Ranchi, Indian Institute of Management Bangalore, Central Library, Guwahati, National Institute of Personnel Management Calcutta, North-Eastern Coalfields, Margherita and Institute of Cooperative Management, Imphal.

I wish to express my deep gratitude to Dr. M.K Khanijo, Advisor of Indian Institute of Applied Manpower Research, New Delhi and Mr. Norman Jennings, for sending books and publications on Coal Mine Workers published by ILO, Geneva, and allowing to refer the report on Coal Sector Manpower in India. I am also grateful to R.C. Banerjee, Executive Director, NIPM for his encouragement.
My sincere thanks to Shri S. Dasgupta, Secretary and Kanti Mehta, President of Indian National Mine Workers Federation, Calcutta for the encouragement and personal opinions on different aspects of this study. I extend my gratitude to Prof. D. Prabhakara Rao, Depts. of Commerce & Management Studies, Andhra University, Vishakhapatnam, Shri N. Mukherjee, Management Consultant, Jamshedpur, Dr. S.N. Pandey, Retd. Executive Director (Industrial Relation) of Tata Steel, Jamshedpur, Dr. G.R. Krishnamurthy, Director Advanced Institute of Management, Mangalore, Dr. Dibaka Panigrahy, Depts of Business Administration, Berhampur University, Orissa, Dr. Sita C. Amba Rao, Prof. (Division of Business and Economics) Indiana University Kokomo, U.S.A. and Dr. V.P. Michael, Prof. of Shivaji University, Maharashtra for their thought provoking interactions.

I would also like to acknowledge all the present and past trade union leaders particularly H. Bordoloi, Mohanlal Mukharjee, Rajendra Phukan, G.N. Saikia and other leaders who provided helpful comments and suggestion.

I would also like to express my deepest appreciation to S.N. Sharma the then Chief General Manager, NEC for his encouragement and positive criticism, Dr. D.B. Ghosh, ex-AR & TC, J.B. Pandey, SK Singh, M.C. Bora, Arjit Roy, A. Kumar and other colleagues who have provided enormous assistance and morale supports when I needed most. For this I am grateful to them without any reservations.

I would also like to express my deepest appreciation to a number of employees and schoolteachers who have made valuable contribution enthusiastically to this research work in the form of distributing, explaining and collecting questionnaires and also for their valuable assistance.
The individuals cited above are not the conclusive one who extended their commendable help. In case any name is left out it is purely accidental, but not intentional.

I owe a personal apology to the family of the above individuals for sacrificing their valuable time and burden of shouldering alone the family while their counterparts was busy in assisting in the completion of this thesis.

The inspiration and love for academic persuasion of my parents has been an inspiration since early days. That is the foundation and backbone of this thesis.

It is hard to find any words to acknowledge my wife, Shrimati Mamata Rajkumar. She had not only look after the children, during my absence and as a working woman, find time to assist in the completion of this thesis. Her persuasion, inspiration and challenge have made all the difference.

Last but not the least I am very grateful to those pioneers who opened the Makum Coalfields which in turn giving me the opportunity to do this research work.

Imphal
27th October, 2000

Bhagya Chandra Rajkumar
Research Scholar
Department of Commerce