ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A discussion in the Department of History, Sri Venkateswara University, Tirupati with Prof. V. Kameswara Rao about the neglected areas of research in the Art History of Rāyalaseema sowed the seed for this work. The Art of Rāyalaseema is yet to get the full attention of the scholars. So my Professor encouraged me to take up the study of the narrative art of this region, as it is not yet seriously thought of as a subject of research. Being a student of Art History and a native of Rāyalaseema, I showed interest in this topic and started the fieldwork. It brought to light the great wealth of narrative art in this region, which is beyond my expectation. I hope this work will encourage more serious study in this field in future.

First and foremost my grateful thanks are due to Prof. V. Kameswara Rao, Department of History, S.V. University for the valuable guidance he gave me in writing the thesis.

I am grateful to Prof. A. Panduranga Rao, Head of the Department of History, S.V. University, Tirupati for the encouragement given to me. I also profusely thank Sri A.R. Ramachandra Reddy, Associate Professor and all the staff members of the Dept. of History, Prof. P.N. Naidu, Head of the Department of Ancient History, Culture and Archaeology and his colleagues for their valuable suggestions given from time to time.

I am deeply indebted to the staff of the S.V. University Library, staff of the Library of S.V.U. Oriental Research Institute, Central Library (T.T.D.) and staff of the Dept. of Archaeology and Museums, Tirupati for the help rendered to me.

I also thank the Dept. of Archaeology and Museums, Govt. of Andhra Pradesh and the staff of the Archaeological survey of India for helping me and permitting me to take photographs of the narrative panels in the various temples I visited. I am especially grateful to Mr. A. Narayananuriti, my colleague and friend for supplying all the literature needed.

I am grateful to Mr. S. V. S. Thyagarajan and Mr. Chaitanya for their help in rough typing. I am indebted to Mr. M. Giri Prasad and Mr. T. Madhavan for patiently correcting and computerizing my dissertation.

Finally I thank my wife Smt. T. Dwarakamayee for constantly reminding me to complete the work and my children Mr. S. V. Sagar and S. K. Sagar for helping me in my work.
