ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Namo Tassa Bhagavato Arahato Sammā-sambuddhassa

First of all, I express my gratefulness to the Most Venerable Thich Giac Nhien, my grand master, who has been an inspiration for me in the Buddhist way of monkhood. Especially, I am thankful to the Most Venerable Thich Giac Ngo, my respected master, who has exhorted me in my training and supported me in my study for over twenty years. I am thankful to the Most Venerable Thich Giac Toan, the abbot of the Central Monastery, who supplied necessary items for me and my brothers and sisters during the time I was there for my study. I am also thankful to Venerable Thich Minh Hoi, Venerable Thich Minh Tuyen and Venerable Thich Minh Hieu, who have been very kind in supporting me with basic necessities to stay in India. Besides, I greatly appreciate the love, help and efforts in unification of Venerable monks and nuns, my brothers and sisters in Dhamma in the Vietnamese Buddhist Congregation, particularly brothers and sisters in the Mendicant Buddhist Group in Delhi, India.

I am indeed thankful to Dr. Rajesh Ranjan, my esteemed supervisor, who has guided me keenly and patiently. I really admire his talent and professionalism. Dr. Rajesh Ranjan helped me since I first came to Punjabi University, Patiala. It is an honour for me in acknowledging the help and support in completing all the official formalities Professor Harpal Singh Pannu, Head of the Guru Gobind Singh Department of Religious Studies has provided to us. The way he welcomed all the Buddhist monks and nuns to his office and even to his own house any time is still fresh in our mind. I express my deep sense of gratitude to him. I also extend my thankfulness to all the professors, readers, lecturers, officers, staff members and students of the Department who helped me in one way or the other during my stay at Patiala. I pay my sincere thanks to my friends and all others whatever role they have been played in this venture. Thanks for all they have done for me.

This work is mainly based on the Theravāda Buddhist canon along with its English translations. Help has also been taken from other works related to the topic. I, therefore, am deeply indebted to the all those authors, translators, commentators whose works have helped me to clarify various points of view while writing the thesis. Without their help it would not have been possible to complete this work. Although I have tried my best to make the thesis error free yet some mistakes must have crept in. It is requested from the intelligent readers and fellow scholars not to hesitate in making comments or feedback on the subject.

Finally, I express my thankfulness to all lay Buddhist followers in Vietnam and abroad, particularly those who live in the USA, who have supported me for long time I studied in India. May all my merits that I have accumulated in my life be dedicated to living beings, particularly my parents who make me proud to be a Buddhist monk “for the happiness of the majority, for peace and happiness of deva-s and human beings” as the Buddha taught.
