Acknowledgments

This thesis would not have been possible without support of many people. It is impossible to acknowledge all of them here, but there are few people who deserve a special mention.

I am forever indebted to my Ph.D. guide, Prof. Dr. B. V. Pawar, for teaching me the basics of research. During these years I happened to know Prof. Dr. B. V. Pawar as an extremely sympathetic and principled personality. I am grateful for his unfailing support throughout this work. He was great in letting me do what I wanted, gave valuable advice and encouraged me even when the things were not going fine. His trust in my abilities helped me overcome many difficulties. I am very fortunate to work under able guidance of him. My present status of knowledge and insight in the research is largely owned by him.

I express deep sense of gratitude towards Hon. Shri. Amrishbhai R. Patel and Hon. Shri. Rajgopal C. Bhandari. I got continuous support and motivation from them which kept my spirits up and encouraged during my research work. They had been always there to listen and help me when my steps faltered, especially meeting deadlines.

I would like to thank Dr. S. R. Kolhe, Dr. A. S. Patil and Prof. Ram Bhavsar from School of Computer Science for valuable discussions on related topics that helped me improve my knowledge in the area and in pursuing research.

I would like to extend my thanks to experts, judges and peers at various conferences and competitions for fruitful interactions and discussions with them. It helped me to be on right track in research.

I am grateful to university authorities at BCUD section and non teaching staff at School of Computer Science for necessary facilities and kind help required to pursue my research smoothly.

I take this opportunity to thank Mr. M. N. Behere, Mr. T. R. Patel, Mr. M. B. Patel and whole teaching and non teaching staff of R.C.P.E.T’s Institute of Management Research and Development, Shirpur for their timely support and cooperation. They all play very important role in making this work a possible one.

I would like to make a special mention to Amit Patil, Vishal Pawar, Vishal Patil, Dipak Borse and Dhiraj Shete who had been there to rescue me in editing troubles, especially Mr. Kalpesh Kuvar who helped me in Latex nuisance.

Finally, and most importantly, thanks to many wonderful people in my personal life for giving their unwavering support throughout, especially during this work. I am lucky to have friends Dr. Ujwala Patil, Dr. Monika Agrawal, Mrs Raksha Sushir and Dr. Manisha Goad to share the various highs and lows I faced during this research. I thank them also for caring about my physical, mental as well as spiritual health.
I am grateful to my in-laws Shri. Jagan. N. Deore (Nana) and Mrs. Sushila (Tai), for their wholehearted support. I convey my earnest thanks to my brother-in-laws, Mr. Rajesh Deore, Mr. Naresh Deore, Mr. Sunil Patil and sister-in-laws Mrs. Vidya Deore, Mrs. Shital Deore and Mrs. Manisha Patil for their moral support and enthusiasm.

My sincere thanks are due to my parents Er. Shri. B. S. Patil and Mrs. Sunanda Patil for their unending love and blessings. Because of whom I can stand steady in every mode of my life, which reflected in my work too. My brother Pankaj and sister-in-law Kirti deserve a special mention for cheering me always.

No words can be ever enough to thank my husband, Pramod for his constant encouragement, understanding and endless patience. My Ph.D. had always been first preference for him, and he kept everything else on hold for this. I owe him for being loving and let his intelligence, passions, and ambitions collide with mine.

My very special thank goes to my 10 year old, daughter Shravani for her sacrifices and lots of patience which she has shown in such a young age, only for me. For her, so many early steps been replaced into matured ones. I hope to return every single missed moment in coming years.

Above all, I bow down to Almighty for giving me strength and courage to accomplish this work.
