Acknowledgments

I have to thank a few people who have accompanied me on this journey, which has been both exciting and often at times, humbling.

My supervisor Dr. K. Suneetha Rani has been a pillar of strength throughout. While her critical insights have informed significant portions of this study, her emotional support saw me through the years, especially when my kids arrived on the scene.

My doctoral committee members, Prof Alladi Uma and Dr Anna Kurian, who with their significant feedback have greatly contributed to the general approach of the study.

Dr K. Narayana Chandran, who generously introduced me to the plays of Anna Deavere Smith.

Dr Sachidananda Mohanty, Dr Pingali Sailaja and Dr Syed Mujeebuddin, who in their capacity as the Heads of the Department, assured me the vital support for the completion of this project.

The Office Staff at the Department of English for their assistance.

I also have to thank the following institutions and individuals:

The University Grants Commission for supporting me with a Junior Research Fellowship and a Senior Research Fellowship for a period of two years each; The Indo American Centre for International Studies (Osmania University Campus) for access to their library;

The American Information Resource Centre (Chennai) for access to their library and materials.

Diane Glancy who graciously sent copies and manuscripts of her works (War Cries, The Sum of Winter, Salvage and Writings on the Process of Native American Theatre). In spite of her busy schedule, she agreed to my request for an interview.
On a personal front, I have to thank the following individuals whose faith in me sometimes far exceeded my self-confidence.

My mother, who pushed me into the path of academics – She had to make numerous sacrifices along the way. Thanks amma.

My sister Priya – for all those encouraging conversations punctuated with the affirming phrase “No Problem!”

My Brother Satish – the days when he showered me with his love and care, because I was and am always his “little sister”.

My teachers at Sri Sathya Sai University – They introduced me to literature in all its glorious variety. They succeeded in making the subject interesting and ensuring that from my academics, I could always draw something that would carry me along. In other words, they taught me that literature was indeed life.

To SN – You came into my life unexpectedly, when I was assailed by doubt and uncertainty…since then…the journey has been interesting and exciting. Most of all, thank you for all those drives to and from the campus, and the midnight tea to prevent me from dozing over the laptop.

To B and R – my twin bundles of joy. Many a time, I was overwhelmed by the nature of responsibilities you imposed on me…but then…you are still my cute babies.

To my inlaws and extended family – for watching over my kids and all the emotional support during my motherhood, so that my research did not suffer.

To S, alias Namaji – a good friend who gave me online company in the graveyard hours, occasionally discussing the finer points of my work.
