ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am indebted to...

Dr. R. Narasimhan — my supervisor. He is an Institution where I learnt a lot and where I enjoy every moment for providing me the infrastructure to write this research work, for his constant encouragement, constructive criticism, inspiration for inhibiting quality consciousness in me. Despite of his busy engagements he always lent his valuable and precious time to bring out the work successfully. In fact this study could not have been possible but for his able guidance and supervision.

Mrs. & Mr. Rajagopal — my parents.

Mrs. & Mr. Srinivasan — my parents-in-law.

"The best help that a father can render to his child is to give him/her a good education and make him/her a great scholar" (Kural 67). They did it and led a life of love and virtue and kept others on the path of virtue by setting an example.

My debts of gratitude are many. I would like to express my grateful acknowledgement to those who encouraged me to do this research work.

I would like to make explicit my special debt to Dr. Ambalagan, Professor, department of Commerce and Dr. Rajkumar, Professor, department of Economics, ICE, for their timely help. With great pleasure I am obliged to record my humble gratitude to them.

I also wish to record my debt of gratitude to the Managements, Principals (Ex. & the present), SDNB Vainkhnav College for Women, Chrompet — who provided superb administrative help without which this work may not have been possible.
In writing the present research work, I have had the benefit of help from my friends and colleagues, several of them who may not get specific mention, but need recognition for the encouragement and help that I received from them.

I am thankful to,

The Madras University Library, Madras-5, Madras Institute of Development Studies, Adyar, Connemara Public Library, SDNB Vaishnav College library and various web sites

The officials in the Labour Training Institute, Chennai, the office of the Central Board for Workers Education, Government of India, Chennai.

Mr. R. Sriram and Mr. G. Balaji for helping me to collect data from sample units. Mr. V. Ramesh, Advocate of Madras High Court for his discussion about the labour laws and Mrs. Shanthi Sriram, for her constant encouragement.

Several hundred sample employees of the sample units for patiently filling the questionnaires and replying for my interview.

The staff of HRD & Quality Control departments and the Department of Maintenance along with the Welfare Officers for providing me necessary information and data. The feed back from them has been of tremendous value.

Finally I want to thank my family members for their silence and forbearance while I was engaged in the writing of this work.

Mr. S. Sampathkumarana – my husband, the symbol of virtue, for all the encouragement and support in completing this work.

My son and daughter – both have been a constant sounding board and source of inspiration.
