Acknowledgments

WTO is a landmark event in the history of mankind. Its impact on the international trading system and economy of the nation is tremendous. It has assumed such a significant and all pervasive role that it could be able to radically change the destinies of the nations. It is more or less a herculean task to study such an immensely powerful and crucial worldwide organisation and its impact on the world’s economy. This formidable task is possible only with the help and cooperation of a number of people.

The present researcher has taken up and also could complete successfully of his study on certain crucial aspects of WTO, because he was helped and cooperated in different ways by a member of persons. Hence it is the pleasant duty of this researcher to thank all those who contributed for the completion of this tough research pursuit. First and fore most, I thank immensely Prof. S.S. Khanuja, Durga Mahavidyalaya, Raipur, and my esteemed research supervisor who guided this work very thoroughly and eminently. He took keen interest and vigorously guided me in every stage of this research work. I frankly admit that without his guidance, encouragement and motivation I could not have finished this work. It is my humble submission that no words are adequate to express my feelings of debt and gratitude to him for his invaluable help in the present research venture.
I am extremely thankful to Prof. Ashok Parakh, D.Litt., the present Principal, Durga Mahavidyalaya, Raipur, who extended his valuable help throughout my research. I am highly benefited by his suggestions and comments which are very useful and enabled me to easily understand the issues and to analyse them in a cohesive manner. I ever remain grateful to him. I owe a great debt of gratitude to Prof. Ajay Kumar Chandrakar, Head of Department of Political Science, Durga Mahavidyalaya, who extended his unreserved cooperation and encouragement throughout my research work. Dr. Amanjha and other faculty of the Department of Political Science and Dr. Asish Dubey, and other faculty members of Department of Commerce have encouraged me. I am thankful to them. The Librarian and other staff of the University assisted me very generously in the collection of data for the present study. I am very much thankful to them. My special thanks are due to them.

I express my special thanks to Prof. M. Bapuji, Acharya Nagarjuna University, Guntur, for his scholarly suggestions and help in locating the sources of data used in the present study. I also profusely and truly thank, Dr. D Nagalah, Rtd., Director of Industries for sharing his intellectually rich ideas and insights and for providing me some valuable literature on the concerned topic. I never forget his help. It is also my moral duty to express my grateful thanks to Prof. Abdul Noorbasha, Department of Commerce, Acharya Nagarjuna University, Guntur for his intellectual inputs.
Several intimate friends of mine, more particularly, Dr. Md. Mastanvali, Reader in Political Science, A.M. College, Guntur, and V. Raghavendar Rao, Lecturer in Commerce, Hindu College, Guntur, extended their helping hand and supported me in several ways. They always used to cheer me to complete this work as early as possible. I owe deep debt of gratitude to them. Mrs. V. Lalitha Kumari, Rtd., Lecturer in English has gone through the drafts patiently and corrected the language. I remain ever grateful to her. I am fortunate to get help from my college Principal M. L. Narayana, K. Venkateswarlu, Head of Department of Commerce, C. Patel, Rtd. Head of Department of Economics, B. Sriramulu, Librarian U. Bhadralah and other colleagues working in PAS College, Pedanandipadu, Guntur. They gave constant encouragement and active cooperation. I like to thank all of them sincerely and honestly.

Of course, my parents and my wife Shaik. Pyari Jan are the real source of inspiration, which enabled me to complete this work. It is their love, affection and concern, which provided me necessary motivation and energy. I profusely and honestly thank them. I am more particularly grateful to my wife for allowing me to avoid even important family responsibilities so that I could concentrate fully upon my research for no less a period of 4 years. She silently and pleasantly put-up with the inconvenience caused to her by my complete involvement in this research. She deserves my appreciation. I am deeply thankful to Mrs. M. Eswari, whose cooperation is immense. Lastly, I am highly thankful to Mr. Saravaran and Md. Shareef for their elegant and prompt typing of the manuscript on the Computer. I remain thankful to all those, whom I cannot name specifically for contributing directly or indirectly for the successful completion of this work. Lastly, my thanks to God.
