ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The first words that spring to my mind when I sit to express my gratitude to Prof. S. L. Agarwal, M.S., F.R.C.S., Head, Department of Surgery, M.L.B. Medical College Hospital, Jhansi and my esteemed teacher and guide are those that Shakespeare immortalised at the height of his career in 1606 in Macbeth.

Thou art so far before

That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserv'd.

That proportion of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say
More in thy due than more than All can say.

Indeed, I have been presumptive enough to harshly intrude upon the privacy of his home at practically all times of the day and for no short periods. As when at work, he has never once showed impatience, going through the manuscript again and again painstaking and meticulously. He has always encouraged me with a fatherly attitude that guides, inspires, instructs—and soothes. For all this and for suggesting to me a topic that was at once interesting and simple, I offer my thanks that he so richly deserves.

I am exceedingly grateful to my esteemed teachers of Surgery Dr. R.P. Kala, M.S., Reader, Department of Surgery, Dr. Dinsh Pratap, M.S., Lecturer, Department of Surgery, Dr. Rajeev Sinha, M.S., Lecturer, Department of Surgery, M.L.E. Medical College, Hospital, Jhansi. All of them have essayed to develop in me a quest for surgical knowledge goading me into doing better by creating a sense of curiosity and interest for the subject. For my thesis, they have helped me immeasurably not only by permitting me to work on their patients but also more actively by offering their own ideas and opinions and by constant encouragement.

Mr. B.P. Tiwari has been good enough to do the typing in a clean, tidy manner with practically no mistakes and in record time. To him I am thus grateful.

Both my father and my wife Sumesa have kept my morale high at all times and have encouraged me constantly. My wife has also helped me with the manuscript.

To them and to others too numerous to mention individually I owe my thanks and gratitude.
