It is my pleasant duty at the very outset to acknowledge my deep indebtedness to my supervisor Dr. Pradip Lahiri, for his valuable guidance, help and co-operation in the preparation of this dissertation.

I would like sincerely to thank the British Council Library, New Delhi and British Library LKO., wherefrom I obtained all my research materials.

My thanks are no less due to Mrs. Johnna Andrew, a British friend of mine, who took pains in sending me valuable materials on Beckett from England.

I would like also to record my sincere thanks for Mrs. Sangita Lahiri for her affectionate care and encouragement.

I should be failing in my duty if I do not express my sense of gratitude to my very dear, revered naniji Mrs. Mangala Bai Vashishtha who has left us for her heavenly abode. Her encouragement, blessings and ever watchful eyes had been my great source of inspiration in taking up this research project.

I do gratefully acknowledge all for affectionate care and help I received from the members of my family, especially from my dear Brother Sh. A.K. Vashishtha.

My husband Sh. Rajeev Sochan Paliwal has been a constant source of inspiration and encouragement. He deserves my hearty thanks as he provided me with every possible help during my studies. His respectable mother and elder brother let me have their kind permission to go ahead with my work. I am indebted to both of them.

Last but not least my warm thanks are due to Sh. Ramdas Kushwaha, an experienced, decent person who has painstakingly typed the entire thesis quite carefully and neatly within a short period of time.

MADHU PALIWAL
All the textual quotations used in this work, if not otherwise stated, have been taken from Samuel Beckett, Waiting for Godot (London: Faber & Faber, 1956, rpt. 1968).