ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Dr. A.H. Chachadi, Director of Kausali Institute of Management, Karnataka University, Dharward is instrumental in my research leading to this thesis. From the day of registration for Ph.D., he has guided me, encouraged me and exposed me to all facets of the research and thesis writing. He suggested different ways of looking at the problem of the study and to rationalise it impassionately. He also provided me with lot of study material which helped me to focus on the study. Dr. A.H. Chachadi also encouraged me to meet many leading personalities in the field of management, government, academics and economics who could give valuable insight in to the study of this complex subject matter. He also made me to present this topic in various forums to get a feedback which made this study more practical and relevant. He read my thesis and made suggestions even during the mourning period due to his mother’s death. My gratitude to him for his encouragement are beyond words. I can only say, blessed are the students who can get a teacher like him.

I thank Prof. S.S.Hugar, Dean of Commerce Department, Karnataka University, Dharwad for his valuable suggestions. I thank profusely the respondents to my questionnaire who poured their heart and head in replying my questionnaire. Apart from this, I spent hours together in interviewing many eminent, experienced personalities occupying the highest position like minister, finance secretary, chief secretary, commissioner, chairman and Managing Director of private and public sector undertaking, Professors of management institutes and economists. During the interview, they brushed aside all their engagements and involved totally in sharing their valuable experience in the interest of the research. I thank all of them from the bottom of my heart.

I also thank Prof. Abdul Kareem of Hubli and Dr. Mohan R. Thite of Griffith University Australia for their valuable suggestions.

Mr. Jahagirdar, chief librarian of British council Library helped me to get many publications on privatisation. I thank him for this assistance.

The meticulous computer work of typing this thesis was done by my office staff untiringly and with all enthusiasm. Professional work of good quality has been executed by them. I thank Arun Phadnis, Prasanna Joshi, Praveen Nargund, Miss Mamata Galagali for their excellent work.

My wife Pooja affectionately encouraged me and my lovely kids Vaibhav and Prarthana were great inspiration to me in completing this thesis.
