CONTENTS

CHAPTER ONE

INTRODUCTION: Source material - nature of available inscriptions - the different names by which the region is known - territorial definition and historical geography - justifications for a separate study of the region’s history - earliest man in South Kanara - the Iron Age and the Parasurama legend - origin and etymology of the word Tuḻu - the dating of early Āḻupa records and reigns 1-15

CHAPTER TWO

THE BEGINNINGS OF HISTORY: the problem of identification of Satiyaputa of the Asokan edict - its identification with Tuḻuva - Saṅgam Tamil literature and Tuḻu-nāḍu - the Kosar, Vamba-Mūriyar and South Kanara - Nānṉan of Koṅkapa and Tuḻu-nāḍu - definition of Koṅkana - Nānṉan’s carrier, territorial possessions, death and probable date - the Sātvāhanas and Tuḻuva - the early Kadambas of Banavāsi and South Kanara - legendary association of Kadamba Mayūravarma with the region - the Halmidi Kannada inscription, Āḻapa-gapa Pasupati, the Āḻupa dynasty and South Kanara - Pasupati and the early Kadambas 16-65 CHAPTER THREE

THE EARLY ĀLUPAS: Early references to the Ālupa dynasty - the etymology of the word Ālupa - the early Chālukyas of Bādami and the Ālupas - Kīrttivarmanā's conquest of South Kanara - the nature of Ālupa subordination to the Bādami Chālukyas - Pulakēśin II and the Ālupas - the rise of Vikramādītya I and the reign of Āluvarasa I - the earliest inscription from South Kanara and its probable date - Āluvarasa I's territorial possessions - the assignment and importance of the Māṇḍūruk grant - the probable dates of Āluvarasa I's reign - officials under Āluvarasa I - his son and successor Chitravāhana I - his territorial possessions - dated references to his reign in Chālukya copper-plate charters - The Shiggaon plates and Chitravāhana I - his queen Kuṃkumadevi - the Pāṇḍya invasion and the battle at Māṇgalaṇapura - the probable date of this battle - the Ālupas and their dynastic name of Pāṇḍya - the Poḷali Ammumāja inscription - the probable date of Chitravāhana I's reign - his son and successor Āluvarasa II - his inscription from Mallam - Ālupa subordination to the Pallavas and the loss of Kadambamapḍala - the probable dates of his reign - his territorial possessions - his son and successor Chitravāhana II - the transfer of Āḷupā allegiance from the Pallavas to the Rāṣṭrakūṭas - Chitravāhana II's insubordination to Gōvinda III and his expulsion from the Pergugunji fort - the loss of a part of the Pombuchcha region - palaeographical study of early inscriptions from South Kanara - Chitravāhana II's return to Āḷuvakhēḍa and the beginning of the civil war - Rapasāgara's rule over South Kanara - his fight with and triumph over Chitravāhana II - the probable dates of Chitravāhana II - Rapasāgara's defeat at the hands of Śvētavāhana - the probable dates of his reign - Śvētavāhana's defeat by Prithvīsāgara - the probable dates of his reign - Prithvīsāgara's reign; territorial possessions and probable dates - His son and successor Māramma - his sovereign titles indicative of peace and prosperity - The Bantra inscription - the Āḷupas and the Gaṅgas of Taḷa-kāḍ - the Rāṣṭrakūṭa invasion and Indapayya's rule over Āḷuvakhēḍa - Prithvīsāgara's successor Vimalāditya - the loss of the rest of the Pombuchcha region - his reign and probable dates - his successor Rapāṇjaya and his probable dates - his successor Dattālupa - his removal from the throne by Kundavarma - the probable dates of his reign - genealogical table from Āḷuvarasa I to Dattālupa 66-153
CHAPTER FOUR

THE MEDIEVAL ĀLUPAS: The earliest dated inscriptions from South Kanara - Kundavarma's reign - his Kadiri inscription - the probable dates of his reign - his successor Jayasimha I - his Taḷāṅgere inscription - the probable dates of his reign - the Chōla invasion of the Tuḷu country and the reign of Bahkidōva Āḷupendra - the second Chōla invasion and withdrawal - Bahkidōva and the Śāntaras - the probable dates of his reign - the undated Varāṅga inscription and its genealogical account - Paṭṭiyodēya's reign - the Goa-Kadamba ruler Jayakesin I's invasion of the Ālupa kingdom - references to the Ālups in Vikramaṅkadeva charita - Ālupa subordination to Vikramāditya VI - the reign of Pāṇḍya Paṭṭiyodēya - the Karaḍi inscription and its interpretation - Pāṇḍya Paṭṭiyodēya's Kariyaṅgaḷa inscription - his sovereign titles indicative of independence - the probable dates of his reign - his successor Kavi Āḷupendra - his dated Udīyāvara inscription mentioning prince Udayādityarasa - earliest dated reference to Pāṇḍya-gadyāṇa and the Toḷaga family - his feudatory Mahāmaṅgalāsvara Sēvyagellarasa - his Kōṭakēri inscription mentioning Pāṇḍyamahādēva - Hoysaḷa Vishpuvardhana's invasion of the Tuḷu country during Kavi Âlupa's reign - Kavi Âlupa and Iruṅgoḻāchōla - the dates of Kavi Âlupa's reign - his successor Kulasekhara Âlupa I - the Bairāpur inscription and its interpretation - his dated inscription from Mangalore mentioning his nephew Bhākidēva - his queen Jākalamādēvi - the dates of his reign - his successor Kupāpā of the Santara dynasty - his undated Varāṅga inscription - his place in Âlupa genealogy - the probable dates of his reign - his successor Vallabhadeva alias Dattâlupa II - his other name of Odgamarāja - probable dates of his reign - his successor Virapāḍyadēva I - his Hānehalli inscription mentioning his mother Paṭṭamahādēvi and queen Ballamahādēvi - the undated Koṭakēri inscription and its interpretation - the dates of Virapāḍyadēva I's reign - his queen and successor Ballamahādēvi - her Keñjuru inscription mentioning aliya Bhākidēva - the dates of her reign - her family - her son and successor Nāgadevasa - the revolt of aliya-Bhākidēva - the reign period of Nāgadevarasa - aliya Bhākidēva's reign - his Sujēru inscription of A.D. 1305 - the dates of his reign - his successor Sōyidēva - his Varāṅga inscription of A.D. 1332 - the Hiriyāṅgaḍi inscription of A.D. 1334 of the Hoysala feudatory Lōkanāthadēvarasa - the dates of Sōyidēva's reign - the Hoysala invasion
vii

CHAPTER FIVE

THE HOYSAĻA OCCUPATION AND THE LAST ĀLUPA RULERS:
Ballāla III's invasion of the Tuḷu country - the Hanagavādi inscription and the battle of Chandāvura - annexation of the Tuḷu country into the Hoysaḷa empire - Ballāla III's queen Chikkāyi Tāyi's rule over South Kanara - her feudatory Lōkanāṭhadēvarasa and his relation to the Ālupas - the political set up in South Kanara during the period of Hoysaḷa occupation - the reign of Kulasēkhara Ālupa II, the successor of Sōyldēva - the death of Ballāla III - the Mēlaḍupu inscription mentioning Chikkāyi Tāyi's son Kulasēkhara and feudatory Lōkanāṭhadēvarasa - the rise of Vijayanagara and the end of Chikkāyi Tāyi's reign - her reign period - the standing army of the Hoysaḷas at Bāarakūr - the last Ālupa rulers - Kulasēkhara II's reign and reign period - his successor Baḥkidēva III - the probable dates of his reign - his successor Kulasēkhara III - the probable dates of his reign - his reign - Viṟapaṃḍyaḍēva II, the last known Ālupa ruler - his only known inscription from Müḷabidūre - genealogical table of the rulers from Vimalāditya to Viṟapaṃḍyaḍēva II 212-230
SOUTH KANARA UNDER VIJAYANAGARA: Annexation of South Kanara into the empire - two inscriptions of Harihara I in South Kanara - the reigns of Harihara I and Bukka I and the lists of governors who administered the Bārekūru and Mangalūru rājyas under them - important events during these two reigns - the reign of Harihara II and the names and dates of the governors - the Nilāvara inscription mentioning Bukka II as a prince - important events of the reign - early rulers of the Chauṭa family - imperial action against the Chauṭa ruler - Hayīvarasa, the ruler of Nagire-rājya - the end of the Āḷupa dynasty - the reigns of Harihara II's successor Virūpākṣa I, Bukka II and Devarāya I - the names and dates of the governors of the two rājyas during these reigns - salient features of these reigns - Timmanna-Odeya and the Hanjamana - the reigns of Rāmaśandra, Vijayarāja I and Devarāya II - the attempt on the life of Devarāya II and the importance of the Bārekūru inscription of A.D. 1449 for Vijayanagara history - names and dates of the governors of the two rājyas during the above mentioned reigns - the dispute between the merchant guilds of chauliyakēri and mūrukēri of Bārekūru, and its settlement - Tojaha Śaṅkarnaṃyaka's rule over Yelare - Appappa-Odeya's action against Sivalli and subsequent restoration of peace - the Bangas of Bangavadi - Ramarasa of Kaḍaba-madu - history of the Chauṭhas from A.D. 1390 to 1434 - the end of Devaraya's reign - the reigns of Vijayaraṇya II, Mallikārjuna, Virūpāksha II and Pratāparṇya - names and dates of the governors of the rājya during these reigns - Vētharasa and South Kanara - Paṇḍarīdeva-Odeya's action against the subjects of Miravara - the Barakuru inscription of A.D. 1469 mentioning Mallikārjuna's son Rājarākhara - Allappāskhara-Chauṭa of Puttige - imperial action against Kāmirāya, the Bahga chief and Devaṇṇa Koṭhāri and subsequent reparations - dispute between the settikāras and the nakharahāṃḍamāna of Barakuru, and its settlement - the hegde families of South Kanara - history of the Hāḍuvali-rājya covering the reigns of Saṅgirāya-Odeya and Indagarasa-Odeya - history of the Kaḷasa-Kārakalu-rājya covering the reigns of Bhairava I, Pāṇḍya I, Pāṇḍya II, Bhairava II, Pāṇḍya III, Bhairava III and Bhairava IV - history of the Nagirājya covering the reigns of Haiva, Maṅga II, Kūsavatēva-Odeya, Saṅgirāya-Odeya, Bhairava I, Bhairava II, Ambirāya, Mallirāya and Devarasa-Odeya - a political compact between the Kaḷasa-Kārakalu and Bahga chieftains - Somāṇāthu Pennappa, ruler of Puṇjaḷiyaraṇya - the end of the Saṅgama dynasty and the Saḷuva usurpation - their effects on the Tuḷu country - the independence of the Maṅgaḷūr region - the accession of Saḷuva Narasiṁha and his conquest of South Kanara - the continued independence of the Maṅgaḷūr region - the reigns of his successors Tirumala and Immaḍi Narasiṁha - names and dates of the governors of the two raṇyas during these reigns - Honnakalasa-mahārāya - and agreement of peace between the heggade families of Yelluru and Kāp - the end of the Saḷuva dynasty and the Tuḷuva usurpation - the reign of Tuḷuva Vīra Narasiṁha - names and dates of the governors of the two raṇyas during the reign - the reign of Krishpā āvarāya, the great - the reannexation of the Maṅgaḷūr region - the Matpāḍi inscription of A.D. 1526 mentioning the emperor's infant son Tirumalarāya - the discontinuance of appointing governors for Maṅgaḷūr-raṇya - the Śimāṭūru and Puttige inscriptions of A.D. 1512 and the local ruling families - further history of the Nagire ruling family, covering the reigns of Devarasa-Odeya, Bhairarasa and Immaḍi Dēvarāya - further history of the Kaḷasa-Karkaḷa family covering the reign of Bhairava V - Krishpadēvarāya's invasion of the Kaḷasa-Karkaḷa-raṇya during this reign-further history of the Ḫādvāḷi-rājya, covering the reigns of Indagarasa-Oḍeya, Devarasa-Oḍeya and Gururāya-Oḍeya - the Sujēru inscription of A.D. 1528 and the compact between the Chauṭa and Bhaṅga chiefs - the two copper plate charters from Kārkaḷa and the local ruling families of South Kanara - the end of Krishnādevarāya's reign - the accession of Achyutarāya and his reign - the reign and murder of Veṅkaṭa - the tyranny of Salakarāju Tirumala - his defeat by Rāmarāya and the accession of Sadasiva - names and dates of the governors of the Bārakūru-rājya after the end Krishnādevarāya's reign - Sūṅkaṇa-nāyaka and the Keḷadi dynasty - Ekadaḷakhāna, the only known Muslim governor of Bārakūru-rājya - communal disturbances at Kōḷēśvara - the fit of South Kanara as amara-māgani to Keḷadi Sadasiva-nāyaka - Sadasiva-nāyaka's military expedition in South Kanara - further history of the Ḫādvāḷi-rājya, covering the reigns of Gururāya-Oḍeya and Chenna-Bhayirādēvi-Āmma - the genealogical table of the Ḫādvāḷi family - history of the Bhaṅgas and their genealogical table - the Vēpuru inscription of A.D. 1537 of the Ajila family - the Sāmantas of Paḍuva-Papamīrū - further history of the Kaḷasā - Kārakaḷa family, covering the reigns of Bhairava IV, Pāḍyappodeya IV, Bhairava V and Pāḍyappodeya V - further history of the Nagire family covering the reigns of Bhairava III and Immedi-
CHAPTER SEVEN

ADMINISTRATION: Early period: nāḍu, nāṭṭu-mudîme - urban administration - rural administration - military administration - citizens' bodies - land and fiscal administration - Medieval period: The ruler - the official hierarchy - the pradhāna, dēśinurushas, bāhattaranivōga, purohitaru and pishivaru - princes and princesses associated with administration - the adhikāri, Qeveya, grāmapi, sēnabōva, urāluva, heggeḍa, haḍana, śrikarana, sāhapi and bēhāri-nāḍu as an administrative division - guilds and associations - explanation of the names of the merchant guilds of seṭṭikāra, nakhara, haṇiamāna and nakharahaṇiamāna - the military organisation called kōḷabāli - administration of justice - administration under the Hoysalas - associations called nāḍu, halaru, ubhaya-nāṇādēsis, ballālucalu, horehinavaru and the sālme - Vijayanagara period: division of South Kanara into the Bārakūru and Maṅgalūru rājvas - the modes of appointing governors to these divisions - sway of many minor ruling families over large parts of South Kanara - administrative divisions called nadu - officials under the governors, the pradhāṇi, adhi-kārī, annapakāra, athavane, śevakāra and madhyas-tha - internal and international trades - the city of Bārakūru and its trade-guilds - the trade centres of Basarūru, Mūdagidure, Vepūru, Māṅgalūru, Kārkāla and Bāindūru - the roles of the nakhara and setṭi-kāra guilds in society - the okkalu, jagattu and janani or janni - kaṭṭaleya varu or smasta-kaṭṭaleya varu - the power, wealth and influence of the guilds - military administration - imperial army and the armies of the local rulers - nāvīkāda-prabhu - administration of justice - modes of punishment - negotiated settlement of disputes - prāyaschitta 368-407

CHAPTER EIGHT

SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS: Early period; Tuḷu as the name of the region, its inhabitants and their dialect - life in Tuḷuva during the Saṅgam Age - life during the early Āḷupa period - the caste system - bravery much valued in early Tuḷuva - family as the unit of early society - natural beauty of early Tuḷuva - importance of agriculture and agriculturists - ownership of lands - commerce under the early Āḷupas - taxation - weights and measures - coinage in early Tuluva - Medieval period: the splendour of the royal audience hall - the caste system - the family as the unit of society - temples as centres of enlightenment and entertainment - economic conditions - weights and measures - ownership of lands - agricultural terms - coinage during the medieval period - taxation - explanation of the various terms denoting taxes - Vijayanagara period: aliya-santana system of succession - surnames - life in cities and towns - road system - day to day life in rural areas - growth of trade and trade guilds - dispute between the merchant guilds of Btrakuru and its settlement - economic conditions - land ownership - the State as land owner - types of lands - land owners and agricultural labourers - taxes - land administration - sales and purchases of lands - temples, citizens and guilds as land owners - gift-lands - weights and measures - scales of land measurement - coinage during the Vijayanagara period - loans and mortgage - economic prosperity

CHAPTER NINE

RELIGIONS: Early period: Saivism as the principal faith of the State and the people - the Pasupata cult - Lokesvara of the Kadiri inscription only a CHAPTER TEN

CONCLUSION: the fall of Vijayanagara - the political independence of the Tuluvas before the advent of Vijayanagara power - the causes for the decline and disappearance of the Alupa dynasty - the indifference of the Tuluvas towards Vijayanagar and the reasons therefor - the role of the many local chieftains - the growth of familiarity between the imperial authorities and their Tuluva subjects - the gifting of the Tulu country to Kejadi Sadashiva-Nayaka and its effects - concluding remarks