ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis is the result of research work done in the Department of Economics, University of Madras, by me during the period from August 1990 to January 1995, under the guidance and supervision of Dr. S. SABHANAYAKAM, M.A., Ph.D., Reader, Department of Economics, University of Madras, Madras-600 005. Words are inadequate to express my sincere thanks to my supervisor. I express my profound gratitude and respect to him for his guidance and encouragement at all stages of my research work by way of spending much of his valuable time. The thesis has gained improvement by his invaluable advice.

I have to express my gratitude to Dr. M. NAGANATHAN, Professor and Head of the Department of Economics, University of Madras. I place it on record my regards and thanks to all the staff members of the Department of Economics, University of Madras.

I thank Dr. P. GOVINDARAJAN, Professor and Head of the Department of Economics, Muthurangam Government Arts College, Vellore, who constantly helped me with his suggestions in the course of this research work.
I express my thanks to Inspector of Factories, and Inspector of Labour, Vellore. I wish to acknowledge my sincere thanks for the valuable literature that I received from the World Bank, International Labour Organisation (ILO), Geneva, Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), Paris. I have spent enormous time in the Madras city libraries and my sincere thanks are due to the librarians of the Madras University Library, the Connemara Public Library (Madras), American Centre Library (Madras), British Council Library (Madras), Madras Institute of Development Studies Library (MIDS) (Madras), Penn Women Study Centre, Mylapore (Madras), Central Leather Research Institute (C.L.R.I.), Adayar (Madras), Secretariat Library, St.George Fort (Madras), Council of Leather Exports, (C.L.E.) (Madras), Central Library (Vellore), Mother Teresa Women's University, Guindy (Madras), Institute of Financial Management and Research, (I.F.M.R.), (Madras).

I am immensely benefited by the congenial and scholarly atmosphere and the friendliness of my fellow researchers in the Department of Economics, University of Madras.
