ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am grateful to Dr. T. Chandramohan Reddy, Reader in Sociology, Bharathiar University, Coimbatore, my guide and well-wisher, without whom this would have not taken shape. I thank him not only for his invaluable guidance but also for his constant encouragement and concerted understanding at each and every stage of this embarkation.

I am thankful to Dr. M. Lakshmana Singh, Professor and Head, Dept. of Sociology, Bharathiar University for his encouragement in carrying out this work.

I do not find words to express my gratitude to Dr. K. Nallappan, Reader in Sociology, Bharathiar University, and my well-wisher, for his encouragement, invaluable comments and the timely help. I am also thankful to Dr. K. Krishnamoorthy, Professor and Head, Dept. of Population Studies, Bharathiar University and Dr. R. Venkatachalam, Reader in Psychology, Bharathiar University for their discussions on the methodological issues.

I am thankful to my respondents and the Industrial Relations Department people of the study organizations, who would not like to be identified. I thank Mr. S. Chidambaram, Premier Polytronics Ltd, Coimbatore for his help in processing the data. I am also thankful to Mr. Selvan,
Research Scholar in Computer Science, Bharathiar University for his timely help in the analysis of data. I am also thankful to Mr. V.M. Selvaraj, M.Phil. in Sociology, Bharathiar University for his help in various modes and to Mr. R. Velusamy for his timely help in typewriting this work in a neat manner.

There are many who have helped me in various ways and I express my gratitude to all of them.
