

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to acknowledge the numerous people and institutes whose support has been integral to the completion of this thesis.

First and foremost, I would like to express my sincere thanks to my guide, Professor Dr. L. Ramamoorthy for his endless hours of counseling and help. He was definitely a source of inspiration and encouragement throughout the process. If it had not been for his patience, guidance, and invaluable comments, the completion of this thesis would not have been possible.

Special acknowledgements go to the Director of Kuvempu Institute of Kannada Studies, Prof. R. Rama Krishna, and the faculty members of the Department of Linguistics and Dr. B. K. Ravindranath at the University of Mysore who kindly assisted me in one way or another during my studies. I am and will always remain honored to derive benefits from the expertise of the faculty.

I am also deeply indebted to Indian Government for giving me the invaluable opportunity of conducting research in India. The hospitality that the people of India in general and Mysore in particular extended to me is really beyond description. I thank them all.

I should also extend my gratitude to the Iranian Islamic institute in Mysore that permitted me to hold all of the classes and treatment there through two months of the study, and also the library of Central Institute of Indian Languages (CIIL) in Mysore and the Library of the University of Mysore. My access to the journals and books in the field of Second Language Acquisition and Applied Linguistics in these libraries was a privilege that I enjoyed in the process of collecting my secondary data.

And the end not the least, I really appreciate my colleague Dr. Mohammad Golshan who gave me a lot of support through my research, and my dear friend Ms. Mozhgan Hajimirza who sent me a very good recent book from England.
