ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am deeply indebted to the University of Kerala for permitting me to do this research work at the Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore-6 and to Professor V.I. Subramoniam, Head of the Department of Linguistics of the University of Kerala for accepting me as an external Ph.D. student of his department.

I am greatly indebted to the Director, Dr. D.P. Pattanayak of Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore-6 for his permission to do this research work in addition to my regular work at the Institute and for his encouragement throughout this work.

I owe a great deal to my research guide Dr. E. Annamalai who introduced me to the study of generative linguistics, especially generative phonology and contributed immensely to the writing of this thesis. I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude to him.
I wish to express my grateful thanks to Dr. M.S. Thirumalai, Professor-cum-Deputy Director, of Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore-6 for his encouragement throughout this work.

I wish to thank Dr. N. Sivaramamurthy, Deputy Director of International Telugu Institute, Hyderabad, for his kind help for the registration of this thesis.

I wish to express my grateful thanks to my friends Dr. K. Rangan, Dr. V. Gnanasundaram, Dr. S. Rajaram, Dr. R. Panneerselvam, Mr. G. V. Natarajan, Mr. G. Sankaranarayanan and Mr. E. N. Mascrenhas of Central Institute of Indian Languages, Mysore-6 for their help in many ways in writing this thesis.
