During the course of my research study, I have received various assistance from various persons from various levels. From and foremost, my research guide Dr. M. Victor Louis Anthuvan, M.Com, Ph.D., St. Joseph's college (Autonomous), Trichy, who's indefatigable efforts took me a long way in the successful completion of this onerous venture. I find no words to thank him for his sustained interest and encouragement, excellent and exuberant guidance all though the work.

I am extremely thankful to the Rev. Fr. Dr. John Britto, M.Sc. Ph.D., the Principal of St. Joseph's College (Autonomous), Trichy, for his permission and moral support for the successful completion of this endeavour.

I should thank Dr. Subramaniyam Professor, Marketing Management, Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore, for the discussions I had with him for selecting this topic for my research. I wish to express my sincere thanks to Miss. Anuradha, Assistant Librarian, Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore, for having introduced me to Dr. Subramaniyam in 1991.

I am very much grateful to Dr. D. Siva Subramaniyan, Head of the Department of Commerce, National College, Trichy, for his inspiring advice and valuable suggestions as a Doctoral Committee member.

I place my record a sincere thanks to the retailers and respondents (housewives) who spared their precious time for collecting the data though it was a seasonal festival time.

I also thank the library authorities of Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore, Osmania University, Hyderabad, Indian Institute of Technology,
American Embassy, British Embassy, Kannimara Library, Chennai. Bharathiyyar University, Coimbatore, Annamalai University, Chidhambaram, Madurai - Kamaraj University, Madurai, Bharathidasan University, St.Joseph’s College (Autonomous), and Bishop Heber College, Trichy, who have permitted me to refer the journals, magazines and books.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to consumer research center, NY, Georgia State University, Georgia; Simon Graduate School of Business Administration, USA; The Conference Board, New York; Dr. Margaret A. Ray, Fredricksburg; VA. Iowa State University, Iowa; St. Cloud State University, MN; The Burke Institute, KY; and Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi for the information to assist in the development of the thesis.

With deep sense of gratitude, I wish to acknowledge the valuable suggestions of Dr. S. Siva Varadharajan, M.Sc., M.S(Purdue)., Ph.D. D.I. Fr., Professor and Head, Department of Agricultural Economics, Agricultural University, Coimbatore in and out of this thesis.

I am indebted to a great extent to Prof. G.Stephen Vincent, M.Sc., M.Phil., PGDBA, Prof. K. Shannuga Vadivel, M.Sc., M.Phil, Department of Statistics, St.Joseph’s College, Trichy and Dr. R. Srinivasan, Department of Maths, Bishop Heber College, Trichy for efficiently handling the statistical tools. My heart is filled with joy while thanking Ninan Eapen and Balaji Ramanujam, students of Indian Institute of Management, Bangalore (1994-1996) and K.K. Senthil Kumar, Bharathidasan Institute of Business Management, Trichy for their service while dealing with Multi-dimensional scaling techniques.
I record my sense of gratitude to Prof. P.V. Cecil, M.A. M.Phil. Department of English, St. Joseph’s College, Trichy and Rev. Br. Deril (Australia) for having gone through the manuscript carefully.

I thank Mr. S.Ve. Gupta and Mr. M. Vijaya Kumar, RVG Graphics for positioning the thesis in the reader’s mind at a high premium level.

On a personal note, I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to my beloved better half Mrs. F. Christiana Brazila, for her encouragement at the time of diminishing marginal utility and our fruits of love F. Manoj Britto and Jeremiaa Gnana Vasanth bearing the pains of sacrificing the affectionate care of their loving father.

I gratefully remember the invisible individuals, who have worked behind the screen if not this thesis would have been dreams, I thank them all.

Above all I thank the Almighty who has been the sole source of spirt and strength to me in all my endeavours in this venture.

Date: 08-03-97

I. FRANCIS GNANA SEKAR