CHAPTER 6

RECOMMENDATION OF THE STUDY
RECOMMENDATION OF THE STUDY

Findings of the study show that all the respondents are aware of microfinance. They get more information from banks about microfinance and the role of SHG representatives is very low. More the respondents are aware about Microcredit and saving schemes and less aware about micro insurance and fund transfer. The respondents are aware about some of the schemes and some of not. The respondents know about the microfinance but are not aware of the complete definition of the microfinance. The respondents are not aware of the insurance and fund transfer scheme of the microfinance. MFIs can start various programmes to promote microinsurance and fund transfer. They should also work upon the role if SHG representatives to promote microfinance schemes.

The overall results suggest that all the respondents are aware of the microfinance but the level of awareness is not high specially in case of micro insurance and fund transfer activities of the microfinance.

This study because of time and cost constraints has conducted on limited sample. This study if done on a bigger sample size may give more reliable results. Hence this topic could be used and lead to further research by increasing the size of sample.
