REFERENCES
REFERENCES

- Agarwal, S. and Taneja S 2005. All slums are not equal: Child Health Services among the Urban Poor, Indian Pediatrics, 42, 233-244.

• Brass logit system (1971): Provides a greater degree of flexibility than empirical models life table.

• Coale and Demeny (1966): Regional model life tables derived from a set of 192 life tables. Priston University Press.

• Creagh, D; Neilson, S; Collins A; Colwell, N; Hinchin, R; Drew C; O'halloran, D and Perry L.J. (2002): "Established Cardiovascular Disease and CVD risk factors in Primary Care Population of Middle Aged Irish, Men and Women," Ir. Med Jr. Nov-dec, 195(10), 298-301.

• Esrey, SA and Habichart J.P (1986): Epidemiology evidence for health benefits from improved water and sanitation in developing countries, Epidemiologic Review 8, 117-128.

• Gupta, A; Gupta R; Sarma M, Rastogi S; Gupta, V.P. and Kothari K (2003): “Prevalence of Diabetes, Impaired Syndrome in an Urban Indian Population” Diabetes Res.clin Pract, July 61(1) and 69-76.

• K.L. Kohli: Mortality in India, A state was study, Sterling Publishing, New Delhi 1977.

• Lenderman’s System of Model Life Tables (1959, 69): Based on a factor analysis of some 157 empirical table, WHO.

• National Family and Health Survey NFHS-3 2005-06 – International Institute for Population Science, Mumbi

ed. M.Ezzati, A.D. Lopez, A.Rodgers and C.J.L. Murray. 1435-93, Geneva; World Health Organization.

- UN model life table(1955) : Constructed using 158 life tables for each sex using statistical technique, UNO.

- U.N. model life table (1981): Designated to the need of developing countries.

REFERENCES

