Acknowledgement

This thesis has been prepared under the guidance of Dr. Kishore Kumar Bhattacharjee, Associate Professor and Head of the Department of Folklore Research, Gauhati University. I am sincerely grateful to him for his encouragement, supervision and support from the beginning to the concluding stage that enabled me to develop an understanding of the subject. I also want to offer my gratitude to Dr. Anil Kumar Boro, Assistant Professor of the same department for his inspiration and suggestions during the study.

As the work was based on the nineteenth century, and also few years of the early twentieth century, most of the primary sources can only be located in libraries and archives. This work would not have been possible without the database of different libraries and archives in and outside Assam. Especially helpful was the Assam State Archive at Guwahati. I owe my deepest gratitude to each and every of these institutions.

Prof. Gautam Bhadra was inspiring enough which convinced me to ask the kind of questions that have found space in this work. I am indebted to him for his support and encouragement.
This thesis would not have been possible without the help and guidance from those scholars with whom I had interacted during the past couple of years and I offer my sincere gratitude to all of them.

I am also indebted to many of my colleagues in the Department of Assamese, Gauhati University for their encouragement during these years. I offer my gratitude to them. My post graduate and research students in the department allowed me to share my thoughts on the Assamese language and literature of the nineteenth century. They have inspired me to think beyond convention. I owe a lot to them.

I would also like to thank my family and friends for their moral support, critical inspiration and patience throughout the study.

Last of all, I am grateful to all who directly or indirectly contributed to the study.

22nd May, 2011

(Banani Chakravarty)
Department of Folklore Research
Gauhati University
Guwahati.