ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Thanks foremost to Dr. M. P. Bezbaruah, Professor in Economics, Gauhati University, for being the supervisor of my Ph. D. research work without whom I would not have been able to do what I have done today. His advice and guidance have been the most valuable forces behind my endeavour. It has been his kindness and generosity that in spite of his busy engagements he always has ample time to discuss and share things with me whenever I have approached. His zero tolerance stands in terms of quality of work has definitely forced me to work hard in order to live up to the expectations. I consider myself privileged and fortunate for getting the opportunity to work under a person of his knowledge and stature. Thank you once again, Sir.

I extend my thanks to the North Eastern Regional Office, UGC, Guwahati for awarding me Teacher Fellowship under Faculty Development Programme for completion of my Ph. D. work. I have special thanks to Dr. Charu Saharia Nath, Principal, Tezpur College, for the continuous encouragement she has extended throughout my research work. My thanks also go to my former senior colleague Mr. D. D. Baruah for his support and enterprising words to me. I am also grateful to my colleagues Mr. Subhash Sarmah, Mr. Ranjan Kalita and Mrs. Rupali Doimari for their kind help and suggestions.

Lot of thanks must be paid to the Indian Institute of Bank Management, Guwahati for offering me to use its library for my library works. Special thanks to Ms. Rupali Sarma, Assistant Librarian, IIBM, for her help and response during my visits to the library. I also thank Mr. Hiren Medhi of RBI, N.E. Regional Office, Guwahati for his help and cooperation during my visits to collect data from there.

I owe special mention to my friends Dharmendra Nath, Subrata Barman and Bhupen Sarma who continue to lend their moral support throughout the period of study. I especially thank Prakash Borah, who has helped me immensely during the collection of primary data.

It will be grossly unfair if I do not extend my sincere thanks to Sri Mrinmoy Sarma, Professor in Dept. of Master of Business Administration, Tezpur University, Tezpur for his special tips during the analysis of the primary data.

Last but not the least my heartiest thanks go to my beloved wife, Mridula Buzar Baruah, who always took equal pain with me and had been the source of inspiration by nudging me to move forward. I also thank my two little twin daughters, Prajakta and Pratichi, who many a time took moments of neglect in their stride, of course unknowingly.

Finally, I am thankful to the staff of the printer "Ticol Style Track" for giving the thesis its final shape.

Date: 10th September, 2010

(Basanta Kalita)