The present study was conducted under the supervision of revered Prof. S.R. Ahlawat, Department of Sociology, M.D. University, Rohtak, and I lack adequate and appropriate words to convey my immense and deep debt of gratitude to him for his indispensable guidance and motivation from time to time. I am also thankful to him for his timely suggestion of the topic of this thesis. I feel enlightened by his contemporary thoughts, which culminated in presentation of this work.

My sincere thanks are also due to Dr. (Mrs.) Neerja Ahlawat, Assistant Professor, Department of Sociology, M.D University, Rohtak, for her constant unsfailing interest in monitoring the progress of my study.

I am highly grateful to the Domestic Violence Protection Officers, staff of the family courts, Women Cells, Police Stations, Counseling Centers and the members of the local bodies and other responsible persons of my area of study who provided me all the relevant information as and when required. I am no lesser, obliged to the staff of the M.D. University Library, ILI Library, Delhi, my colleagues, specially Dr. Vijender Singh, Assistant Professor, Department of Sociology, Kurukshetra University and friends as without their help and cooperation the present work was not possible to be completed in such a short period.

Last but not the least, I am grateful to my younger brother Anil Dhull, Asstt. Professor, C.R. Law College, Hisar, for his relentless support.
