ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Working on this thesis has been one of the most challenging and learning experiences of my life. The culmination of this work makes me thankful to God Almighty who gave me the strength to complete my dream project. This would not have been possible without the unfaltering support of my supervisor Prof. Dr. Amita Singh. My endeavours have been successful due to the able guidance of my supervisor Prof. Dr. Amita Singh. I am grateful to her for the faith that she reposed in me and the encouragement that she gave me in my most troubled times. I am also thankful to all the faculty and staff of the Centre for the Study of Law and Governance for their help and support.

I would like to thank my family for their unending support and encouragement throughout the period of the research. There were definitely times when I was not available for them since I was working hard on the thesis, but my family has always been a steady anchor in making sure that I keep working at my goal. I feel blessed to have amazing parents who have stood by me through thick and thin and because of whom I have been able to carry this research till the end. They taught me to dream, showed me the limitless horizon of possibilities and gave me the strength to pursue my dreams with discipline, hard work and dedication. The priceless contribution of my husband who was a steady source of encouragement and my pillar of strength throughout the research period is one of the reasons of my accomplishment. My brother, who has a keen interest in the subject was always open to discussing new ideas and theories, many of which have found place in the thesis. My friends who have been supportive throughout this period deserve my heartfelt thanks.

This research is also the result of a lot of practical experience that I gained as the Assistant Public Information Officer of Jawaharlal Nehru University and in some instances as the Public Information Officer of the University. The problems and situations that I faced while handling the Legal Department of the University especially the challenges of reading the Right to Information Act in conjunction with other statutes led me to believe in the need for this research. I feel honoured that the Centre for the Study of Law and Governance has provided an administrator the academic opportunity to learn through research and theoretical perspectives.
While every effort has been made to quote each and every author referred and every report, website and secondary source of data that has been studied, however, inadvertently if any mistake has been made, then I tender my sincere apologies for the same.
