ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It gives me immense pleasure to acknowledge the debts that I have incurred upon during my doctoral course in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. I have earned those debts more during authoring this doctoral monograph.

Prof. Abdul Nafey, my mentor and doctoral supervisor, figures first in the directory from whom I received academic insights of practical importance that helped me accomplish this study. He has nurtured me to think with creative independence while instilling academic traits that guide me in every walk of life. Once he pointed out to me that a Ph.D. can change three generations! I must acknowledge that I have learned more from him by observing than listening to him.

Since the first day of my doctoral programme, I have enjoyed my space to express and argue with Prof. Nafey. It would be the dearest gift to myself if I could uphold and exercise these values in my life.

I am indebted to Mr. Winston Dookeran, the Foreign Affairs Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, who opened up an avenue for me that enriched the research project and brought new flavour in my academic thinking. He not only recommended for my participation in the 37th annual convention of the Caribbean Studies Association held in Guadeloupe but also enabled me to partake by generously extending financial assistance.

My academic interest in the Caribbean was first generated by a presentation made by Prof. Brisnley Samroo in JNU few years back. I was happy to meet him in his Office in the University of the West Indies (UWI) few weeks ago where he breeds such inspirational presentations. I am indebted to Prof. Samaroo. He, along with Ambassador Malay Mishra, Prof. Ramesh Ramsaran, Dr. Prim Nath Guptar, and Mr.
Zainool Ali, made my stay comfortable one in Trinidad and Tobago during my field research. Ms. Pearl Chin made me to feel at home when I visited the island of Tobago. I discovered a ‘pirated’ copy of JNU logo in her bathroom tap. I am thankful to all of them.

I am grateful to Dr. Debbie A. Mohammed who guided me at the Institute of International Relations (UWI) and helped arrange my interviews in Trinidad.

A number of persons have played formative role of various kinds in graduating me as a student of Latin American and Caribbean Studies. I express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Jose Leal Ferreira, Prof. R. Narayanan, Prof. Christopher S. Raj, Ambassador R. Rajagopalan, Prof. Darvesh Gopal, Prof. Chintamani Mahapatra, Prof. K. P. Vijayalakshmi, Dr. Priti Singh, and several others for their respective roles.

I am thankful to the students in the Centre for US, Canadian and Latin American Studies. My occasional interactions with them helped me clarify several of my own ideas and assumptions on the Circum-Caribbean issues. Thanks are also due to the Centre and School staffs for their co-operations in various stages of the study.

I have utilised the treasures from Central Library and EXIM Bank Library in JNU, Ratan Tata Library in Delhi University, and Alma Jordan Library and Institute of International Relations Library in UWI. I am grateful to the librarians and staffs of all these places of academic workshops.

The University Grants Commission, New Delhi awarded me Junior and Senior Research Fellowships; the School of International Studies (JNU) financed my field research in the Caribbean archipelago; and the Caribbean Studies Association (CSA) and the Foundation for Politics and Leadership (both in Trinidad) awarded grants and facilitated my participation in the 37th CSA convention held in Guadeloupe. All these together have enabled me to realise my research project in a dignified manner. I extend my sincere gratitude to the concerned persons in these trusts and institutes.

Finally, I acknowledge that I am sole responsible for the errors committed in this study.
