ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my gratitude and prayers to GOD and my parents, whom I see equally. Their contribution in whatever I’ve achieved so far is beyond measure. I would especially like to thank my father, Mr. N.K. Agarwal for all his support and encouragement and for embracing his daughter’s dream of pursuing a PhD as his own.

I sincerely thank Dr. Sushma Mehrotra, who has not only been a guide to me in her professional capacity but also a mentor. She has trusted me and helped me pursue my academic pursuits and at the same time achieve personal milestones. I thank her for being approachable and making time for me when constraints on her own time were immense.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude towards Dr. P.U.Shah (Ex. Head of Dept. of Neurology, K.E.M. Hospital Mumbai). Her contribution in my personal, professional and academic development has been more than she can ever imagine. Her continuous support and co-operation has helped me complete this venture. It was with her co-operation that the entire study was conducted at the E-Cell, the official premises of the Indian Epilepsy Association’s Mumbai Chapter. I consider her contributions as God sent.

I am also grateful to Mr. B. Moradian whose timely help was invaluable during the analysis of the study and, as a student; I admire his ability to make statistics, which is usually a deterrent, a pleasure to work with.
I thank Dr. Anahita Hegde (Head of Dept. of Paediatric Neurology, Wadia Hospital) and Dr. Sangeeta Rawat (Head of Dept. of Neurology, K.E.M. Hospital) for helping me contact their patient groups.

My deepest regards to the members of the Samman (Epilepsy support group at E-Cell, Mumbai) and to all the other people with epilepsy and their parents who participated in this study and opened their hearts and their personal lives for me to understand and more importantly helped me comprehend the impact that epilepsy has had on their lives.

I would also like to thank my good friend and colleague Ms. Bhavisha Sanadhya, who not only assisted me in data collection but also took time out to read and edit the entire manuscript.

Most importantly I would like to thank my husband, Mr. Himanshu Shah for helping me at every stage of this study, motivating me and inspiring me when I was close to giving up. It is his help and support that helped me balance the intricate responsibilities of being a proficient home maker and a dedicated professional.

This entire venture has taught me how invaluable a contribution the family can make in one’s personal and professional development and therefore I would like to take this opportunity to thank all my family members - Mr. Bipin Shah, who being an academician himself understood, empathised and encouraged me when I needed it; Mr. Bhavik Shah who was responsible for keeping last minute technical hitches at bay and most importantly Mrs. Bakula Shah, and Ms. Seema Agarwal, who’ve supported me and looked after my children while I pursued to work on this PhD study.

This piece of acknowledgement although lengthy would be incomplete if I did not thank my two boys Veer and Vihaan, who for some godly reason tempered their own demands when I had to study and have survived their mother's psycho babble for all these months without a whimper...

Thank you all.
