ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my pleasant duty to place on record my deep sense of gratitude and esteemed regards to my guide, Dr. C. L. Chandan, Professor, HP University Business School, Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla, without whose consistent support and encouragement this work could not have been completed. In fact, he has been a constant source of inspiration for me throughout my study. He has been instrumental in making this study feasible by providing very valuable suggestions and helping me at different stages of the study.

In the preparation of this study, I have drawn rather liberally from the knowledge and experience of several officials of World Bank; Ministry of Environment and Forest, Govt. of India; and Emergent Ventures India, a leading international consulting firm engaged in carbon finance business. They have not only readily provided me the voluminous data of relevance for the study but also spared their valuable time to discuss with me on the subject.

I would also like to thank my colleagues at SJVN Limited, Shimla for helping me in collecting, collating and analyzing the data, and presenting the same in an understandable form. In particular, I would like to place on record my thanks to Mr. Sanjeev Sharma and Mr. Sunil Chauhan for assistance provided to me in analyzing and presentation of data. I would also like to thank Mr. Rajesh Gupta and Mr. Dharam Bir Verma who always made themselves available to help me in collection of data, its presentation and in other secretarial assistance from time to time.

I stand indebted to my friends Dr. Tanuja Joshi and Mr. Dinesh Gupta for their constant cooperation, encouragement and continuously boosting my morale throughout this research.

In addition, I thank my family for being there for me throughout this study. This research took approximately 5 years in its completion and throughout I could see the spark and pride in the eyes of my father Mr. Rajender Parkash Gupta and mother Mrs. Sheela Gupta for the very fact that their son is pursuing research. This feeling of pride always inspired me to work hard and complete my research. I thank my wife Mrs. Poonam for her unconditional support and encouragement; for listening to my complaints; sharing my frustrations and above all for believing in me. My son Prateek for assisting me through downloading the requisite and relevant material via internet.

I am particularly, indebted to the Indian project proponents who have spared their valuable time and supplied me the information required in the form of a Questionnaire and also for telephonic discussions on the subject. Their feedback has made this study more meaningful.
