Acknowledgements

I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks to the people whose presence has contributed in important ways to the completion of this project:

Ratheesh Radhakrishnan for encouraging me to apply for the PhD programme at CSCS.

Dr. J Devika for an afternoon discussion on my research proposal which helped me understand the contours of the project.

Late Dr. Usha Zacharias for letting me understand with your life what it takes to be a critical insider of academia. For the love and laughter that won’t come back.

CSCS for the PhD course work, WIPs and the library.

The faculty at CSCS for their support and encouragement.

Dr. S.V Srinivas for helping me through the process and ensuring the successful completion of the project.

Dr. Sanil V and Dr. Milind Wakankar for their insightful comments at different stages of this work.

My classmates at CSCS Pallabita, Krishna, Ganesh, Elizabeth, and Girijechi for all the discussions which helped us find ways of reading writing and thinking.

Rakhi for the buoyancy and resilience. For those inspiring phone calls and motivating mails.

Nagaraj, Maheshwari, Vijayalakshmi, Padma and Nagesh for all the help at CSCS.

All the staff and librarians at Kerala State Archive, Ulloor Smaraka Grantha Sala, Appan Thampuran Smaraka Granthasala and especially Mathew, librarian at KCHR, Thiruvanathapuram –the library which literally gave space to sit and write this thesis.

Raju Chettan, Resmi for the care and warmth.

Mithra and Muktha for all the questions you managed to ask and for all the questions you will ask in the future.

Shahina K K for the feeling of Sisterhood. For the spirit of feminism. For the differences and dialogues.

Dilip Raj for the unending phone calls where we discussed almost everything under the sun except this project.
Meera Moorkoth, for being the person who saw me through some of the toughest writing periods and who made sure that I survived those periods. For everything awaits us in the future.

Ambika for the unmatched wit and unbeatable passion for life. For being the most amazing friend Bangalore days gave me.

Coffeegraphy and Body Tree for helping me float through the PhD days.

Manoj for our first night. For being there in the days and nights before and after the night. For the promise of friendship.

Niramay for being an easy baby and a sensitive toddler. For urging me to finish my ‘ABCD’ fast. For letting me understand the infinite ways of being playful.

Achan for a childhood filled with poetry and political slogans. It is my greatest loss that you are not with me to see the completion of this project.

Amma for being the lifeline among the deadlines. For the love and caring labour upon which this thesis is standing.

Dr. Anup Dhar for being a true ‘friend guide and philosopher’ every PhD student hopes to get, but only the fortunate ones get. For being that finger pointing at the moon. If I haven’t seen the moon, it’s my fault.

And finally to the women who trusted their voice with this project. Without you this project could not have find its voice.
