Acknowledgement

I am very grateful to my guide and it gives me pleasure to express my deep sense of gratitude to Dr. (Mrs.) R. C. Aiyer for her able guidance and constant encouragement throughout the entire period of this work. I must appreciate for her every day helping attitude which was the constant motivating factor for me to complete this thesis.

I would like to gratefully acknowledge Dr. R. N. Karekar for his help, guidance and encouragement during PhD work. During these years I have known Dr. R. N. Karekar as a sympathetic and principle centered person. His overly enthusiasm and integral view on research and helping nature has made me a deep impression on me. I owe him lots of gratitude having me shown this way of research. He could not even realize how much I have learned from him. He has been a constant pillar of support and knowledge throughout my PhD.

I thank the Head, Department of Physics, Prof. D. S. Joag, for allowing me to use the departmental facilities. I would also like to thank the non teaching staff for their help, particularly Mr. Agashe for excellent photographic work.

It’s my pleasure to thank, Hemant, Niranjan, Koustubh, Shiju, and Mrs. Rohini Joshi for helping me in simulation work. I am thankful to Mr. Narendra for providing me mechanical support during prototyping of instruments. I am also thankful to Dr. Pankaj Koinkar for his valuable suggestions during thesis writing. Also my special thanks to my friends Harikrishna, Jagdish, Islam, who helped in my work time to time. I would also thank Dr. Mahesh for helping me in providing references.

At the same time Dr. Medini, my wife, deserves special thanks for helping me at every stage of my work.

I really don’t have the words to express my true feelings for all my relatives, friends and teachers who have helped me in all these years. Their best wishes have helped me to reach this destination.

It is impossible to thank everybody without leaving somebody out. Similarly, it is not possible to list the extent of support rendered by each person. At the end of this acknowledgement, I would like to mention my mother and family, who surely know that they are not the last to be remembered by me.

Atul Kulkarni