ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The endeavour of my doctoral research has been fulfilling as I learnt a few things about India and its natural assets; India which generally is not seen by many common eyes. The way rivers are revered as mother deities and how they are profaned which ruins her sanctity were points of curiosity at the initial stages and in the course of my reading, I realized that the fight between respect versus ravishing goes slightly unspoken and much unnoticed, deliberately may be. Web pages and news papers flood with the concerns of the life and death of the river and lives connected with them. Literary writers have also attempted to bring these situations in focus through the travel books which were sadly just the showcase material either for the libraries or coffee table till now but mercifully they are gaining value in the academia of late. With this dissertation, I hope that many more minds will explore this area and probably will make the academic world more fertile; and the unseen India more picturesque.

It is my immense pleasure to express my deep gratitude towards those who have shown faith and confidence in my capacity. My foremost gratitude goes to my guide, Dr. Sanjay Mukherjee, Associate Professor, Department of English and Comparative Literary Studies, Saurashtra University, Rajkot for believing in me, and encouraging me to work on this area. He has been a constant teacher, a guide and a guardian to whom I can approach for any academic and personal matter. With his extensive experience, knowledge and meticulous approach for the work he has always made me work more than what I was capable of doing. His keen interest, constant discussions and pinpointed suggestions on different issues have brought this dissertation to its present shape. Each reading session with him has enriched my understanding of the subject in particular and literature in general.

My earnest thanks to Prof. Avadhesh Kumar Singh, Director, School of Translation Studies, IGNOU, Delhi for suggesting various sources, guiding with their placement in the context of my work and motivating me from the conception of this research work.

I extend my sincere thanks to Prof. Kamal Mehta, Head, Department of English & Comparative Literary Studies, Saurashtra University, Rajkot, who has always believed in my capacities and guided me about the finer details of a research work, especially its practical nitty-gritty.

Dr. Mehta and Dr. Mukherjee have infused the curiosity for research in me since my days of Masters Studies in the Department. Their formal and informal teachings have helped me in bettering my reception of literature and shaping my self. I thank Dr. Ravisinh Zala for motivating me to take up the first step of the entrance test and his confidence made me dare to think of taking up research immediately after my M.A. He has always been very resourceful in terms of providing books and suggestions. I am also thankful to Dr. Jaydipsinh Dodiya and Dr. Anup Nair for their support. My thanks are all due to the faculty of my alma mater, for always being extremely caring and supportive throughout these years.

I am grateful to Mr. Arun Agnihotri at whose place the genesis of this research topic took place while reading an article on a travelogue on the Indus Valley. I am immensely thankful to Mr. Narotam Palan from Porbandar for providing me a number of resources in the initial phase of my research. The references and locations that Mr. Palan had provided were all the basic references for Gujarati travelogues. Being such an elderly scholar, his enthusiasm for helping a beginner in research was very encouraging. I am indebted to Lt. Shri Bholabhai Patell for his constant guidance on travelogues and especially making me aware of the Gujarati sources. His warm concern as a senior, readiness for guiding and making things available and putting me in touch with a person like Shri Jogeshbhai Thakar was remarkable. I must thank Prof. Prashant Sinha, former Head, Department of English, Pune University, Pune for his very insightful discussion and guidance on this subject during the early phase of my research work. I sincerely thank Dr. Naresh Ved, former Vice Chancellor, MK Bhavnagar University, Bhavnagar and Dr. Vinod Joshi, Head, Gujarati Department, MK Bhavnagar University, Bhavnagar for allowing me to have discussions with them about Gujarati sources pertaining to my subject and bringing very old books to my knowledge. I am grateful to Shri Jogeshbhai Thakar for continuously checking on the progress of my research work and providing diverse contacts and references in case of the Narmada. His well researched information and adventurous expeditions on the Narmada have always kept me updated about the current happenings on and around the river.

I express my gratitude towards Shri Dhruvbhai Bhatt, Shri Amritlal Vegad and Miraben for giving me their valuable time for interview and sharing their experiences of journey on the Narmada. They have been very generous by providing me numerous sources from their collection; and motivated me by being hopeful about this work turning out to be a fruitful attempt in this less explored area. I thank Mr. Dennison Berwick from Canada for his discussions regarding his experiences of his journey on the Ganga and sharing his later ruminations on the related aspects of the subject through emails. I thank Mr. Jeremy Thomas from Australia for providing a few old references on the Narmada from his personal collection.
I thank Mr. Tarakbhai Oza from Vallabhvidyanagar, for providing resources and information about the books and people instantly for this massive work and Mr. Ajaysinh Chauhan also from Vallabhvidyanagar for making me familiar with the works of Shri Amritlal Vegad in the early days of my work.

I am equally thankful to Dr. Maulik Vyas, Dr. Bhakti Vaishnav, Dr. Nawal Kishor Sharma, and Dr. Sunil Sagar for providing me constant guidance regarding analyses of the issues and putting them in writing in early drafts of my thesis. I thank Ms. Jagruti Bheda for accompanying me during my visits to different libraries and searching and collecting pertinent material. I thank all my friends and colleagues for their continuous encouragement. I thank all the teachers of my school and graduation days who have been taking pains in moulding me as a student.

I extend my thanks to different libraries and their staff. Bhaikaka Library, S P University, Vallabhvidyanagar, Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, M S University of Baroda, Vadodara, Central Library, Saurashtra University, Rajkot, CCDC Library, Saurashtra University Rajkot, Central Library, Gujarat University, Ahmedabad, Mahila College Library, Bhavnagar, SCILET Library, Madurai; which allowed me access to various old and latest sources on the subject. I sincerely thank Shri Pravinbhai Doshi of Baroda Book Corporation, Vadodara for making books available at very short notices. I am thankful to the non-teaching staff of the Department of English and Comparative Literary Studies, Saurashtra University for making the documentation process quite smooth in the course my research work.

I express my gratitude towards my relatives and friends like Pooja Mehta and Venu Trivedi who have made my stay comfortable in Rajkot whenever I have landed for my work. I am also thankful to Mr. Kapil Shukla for his technical assistance during the last phase of my research work. I am sincerely indebted to my father Mr.
Nitin Vaishnav for always being very enthusiastic regarding my studies and making references and resources available. I thank my mother Mrs. Smita Vaishnav for her endless support and patience. I thank my brother Chinmay Vaishnav for his timely comments on my writing and technical support wherever needed. Without their faith and encouragement, this work would not have been possible in this form. I am thankful to each and everyone who have been part of making this journey pleasant in one or the other way.
