CONTENTS

Epigraph

Chapter – I

Introduction: Riverine Civilizations and Growth of Culture with Focus on India  1

Chapter – II

Journey of Flowing Genres: Novels and Travelogue  19

Chapter – III

On the Ganga and the Narmada: English and Gujarati Fictions  93

Chapter – IV

On the Ganga and the Narmada: English and Gujarati Travelogues  126

Chapter – V

Assessment: Riverine Life and Literature  170

Bibliography  187

Appendices  198

i) Map of the Ganga
ii) Map of the Narmada
iii) Interview with author Dhruv Bhatt
iv) Interview with author Amritlal Vegad
v) Sketch of the Banks of the Narmada by Mr. Ashok Sri vastava vi) Sketch of the banks of the Omkarewhsar by Amritlal Vegad
vii) Published Research Paper
Let us flow together:
we will enrich the lands we touch.
Will give thousands of names
to being gripped by this frenzy,
will call life the flowing off in a surge,
will tie in a divine consciousness
the being awash in our own current,
And one day,
drifting this way
through forests at times, villages at times, cities at times
to merge into the sea,
we will stubbornly say
that the river does not grow old.

From ‘The River Does Not Grow Old’
by Kunwar Narain
(originally in Hindi, translated by the poet)