ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I feel it my bounden duty to pay my gratitude to Dr. B.R. Subrahmanya, Reader and Head of the Department of Ancient History & Archaeology, Nagarjuna University, who has directed me in the present research venture. I thank him sincerely, for the thesis would not have taken the shape, without his illuminating guidance.

I express my deep indebtedness to Dr. B.S.L. Hanumantharao, Guntur, the spirit behind me all through this enterprise, whose enlightened suggestions moulded my thoughts.

I thank with due respect, Prof. D.C. Sircar, Calcutta, Prof. A.M. Shastri, Nagpur and Prof. R.K. Chaudhuri, Begusarai (Bihar) for their clarifying my thoughts on many an occasion through their letters and despatch of articles, which were a source of inspiration to me.

I cannot adequately thank the late Prof. R. Subrahmanya, who introduced me to the discipline of Ancient History & Archaeology.

I thank the authorities of the Nagarjuna University, particularly the Department of Ancient History & Archaeology, for permitting me to conduct research and providing me with all the requisite facilities. I thank one and all in the Department for their kind co-operation, useful discussions and suggestions in the course of the work.

I thank finally, the Indian Council of Historical Research, New Delhi, for their liberal financial assistance to this research project, to meet the expenses of study tours, stationary and typing.

I take this opportunity to thank all those scholars, whose works, I have drawn on, but whom it is not possible here to mention individually. In conveyed my indebtedness to them by referring to their works at proper places.
