Acknowledgements

I deem it my duty to express my gratitude to my elders and colleagues, who had always been a source of encouragement and cooperation all through the research study and in the production of the dissertation.

At the outset my heart-felt thanks are to Prof. V. Sundara Rama Sastry (Retired), Department of History and Archaeology, Acharya Nagajuna University, for he has been the spirit behind my efforts. He paid utmost importance to my research studies, threw open all his resources, physical as well as intellectual, before me and had always been available for consultations, discussions and enlightening instruction on various aspects and paid unlimited care and attention. His illuminating elucidations on various aspects of the subject of study had been main support and strength in producing this dissertation.

My thanks are due to Profs. B. David Raju, V. Anuradha and P. Ramalakshmi, the Heads of the Department successively through the period of my stay as research scholar, pursuing my studies. They had always been kind to me by extending all the required facilities and encouraging me at every step.

I express my deep felt indebtedness to my fellow research scholars in the Department, who had always been providing me their company, which has been cheerful and enlightening. Interaction with them often on various aspects of the study proved very beneficial to me.

I thank the authorities of Dr. B.R. Ambedkar Memorial Library on the University campus, for their co-operation in securing the books and journals that required in the study and for their friendly and generous treatment.

I pay my humble gratitude to my Parents, who had always been anxious at my progress and unswerving in their efforts in making what I am at present.

Last but certainly not the least are my warm, affectionate and feelings of love and thankfulness, to my wife, Mrs. Y. Bujji, who took all steps to seem my seriousness in the study never reduced. Words fail to properly convey my indebtedness to her in every respect, connected with this project, for remaining always by my side with her unlimited love and encouragement and co-operation.

Finally, I thank Sri Kishore, proprietor, Rajarajesvari Commercial Institute, 4th line Arundelpet, Guntur, for the excellent production of the dissertation with his expertise in computerized typing and Xeroxing and also M/s Navrang Binding Works, Brodiepet, Guntur, for the binding work of the book.

T. Naga Raju