ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, I am thankful to almighty God for his showered blessings.

It is my pleasure and privilege to express my immense gratitude and respect to my learned supervisor Dr Anita Sharma, Assistant Professor, Department of Psychology, H.P. University, Shimla. Whose patience, consciousness, tremendous support, advice, sustained guidance and timely help encouraged my to complete my research work. Infact the submission of this thesis well in time have been possible due to her help and co-operation.

I am immensely grateful to Dr Dalip Malhotra for his constant inspiration encouragement and sustained guidance he has given me doing my research work. It was just his patronage that pushed me ahead by producing all guidance and necessary tips at various stages of this research for its completion.

I am very grateful to all the staff member of department of psychology for their co-operation on various occasions.

I have no word to express my gratitude to my respected parents, In-laws and loving husband and my daughter Tanvi whose care, faith and co-operation inspired one a lot for completing this journey. Special thanks to my most affectionate sister, Monu and My caring brother Anil.

From the core of my heart, I would specially likely to thanks my loving Papa Shri H.C. Chauhan and my husband Mr. B.S. Thakur without their keen interest, sympathetic attitude, moral support and financial assistance it would have been difficult to accomplish the present work. My father and my husband has been a real source of inspiration throughout my career.

All words would be futile and meaningless if I forget to articulate extreme sense of veneration to all my loving friends Neelam, Poonam, Hema & Veena Sharma. They all have been a real source of motivation for me during this study.

I failed to find words to sincerely acknowledge the teachers and students of various government and public schools from the data was collected.

Last but not least My Thank are also due to Mr. Manu Sood and Ms. Ranju, Kiran, Jyoti and Anita who helped me in typing the thesis.

However, the responsibility for the errors that remains is all mine.
