ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis is the end product of my journey in obtaining my Ph.D. I have not travelled in blankness in this journey. This thesis has been kept on track and been seen through to completion with the support and encouragement of numerous people and various institutions. At the end of my thesis, I would like to thank all those people who made this thesis possible and an unforgettable experience for me.

The journey of my Ph.D started in 2008, as a Ph.D scholar in the Department of Sociology, Utkal University, Vani Vihar, Bhubaneswar, Orissa under the guidance of Dr. R.K. Mohanty. An interesting and most noted issue across the world about my state “livelihood of fishermen in Chilka” was finalized for me as my research problem for my Ph.D. At this moment of accomplishment, first of all I pay homage to my guide, Dr. Rabindra Kumar Mohanty. This work would not have been possible without his guidance, support and encouragement. Under his guidance I successfully overcame many difficulties and learned a lot. I feel greatly indebted towards Dr. Mohanty for accepting me as his student and agreeing to provide guidance to me and lead me to successfully realize my dream of completing my Ph.D. Words alone cannot express my gratitude towards Dr. Mohanty for his understanding and generosity to accept me as long distant student. With my job responsibilities, I hardly could reach him in person for guidance, but he never let this distance be a barrier in the progress of my thesis, on the contrary he took initiatives and dedicated his time during late night hours, called over phone for discussions and also motivated me to concentrate on the work when he noticed me deviating. I admire Dr. Mohanty for the dedication he has for his students and I have been privileged too. I am proud that in today’s world where mostly teachers have become professionals and education a mere occupation, I have been blessed with a teacher in its true sense. His detailed study to my drafts, minute observations, valuable advice; constructive criticism with occasional but strong scolding and extensive discussions around my work with some interesting examples have immensely enhanced my knowledge and kept me motivated.

A special thanks to Mr Ramesh Nayak, PhD Scholar, Vani Vihar for the support in sharing his experience and learning which have helped me plan my work more meticulously. He has been kind enough to take time out to review my documents and give his valuable inputs to further streamline it. Mr Nayak has generously shared his time and knowledge in our cooperative work on building a foundation infrastructure for my report writing and has played a major role in making me understand the dos and donts of reporting.

A special thanks to officials of Chilika Development Authority, Department of Fishery and Animal Husbandry, NGOs, local administrative authorities of Chilika for their support during the research. Furthermore, I would also like to acknowledge with much appreciation the crucial role of administrative and technical staff members of the CDA who have been kind enough to advise and help in their respective roles. A special gratitude to Asish Sahu, Research Fellow, Central University, Hydrabad for making life fun while working. I would like to express my special thanks to him for being a great soul. He was always ready to help with a smile, during the data collection period.

My learning in the journey has not only benefited me in completing my thesis on the dedicated research topic but has also given me an insight on capturing, formulating and articulating my analytical work on any topic to present a concept in a methodical and meticulous way. Adopting this approach I have worked on various other social topics and presented my studies in different National and International Conferences, Seminars, Workshops and Colloquia which have been well recognized. I very much appreciate the complementary perspectives, challenges and practical suggestions the organisers provided at various stages of the life cycle.

I would also like to acknowledge the academic and technical support of the Department of Sociology, Utkal University. The library facilities and computer facilities of the University have been indispensable during my research. My special gratitude to Prof. Navaneeta Rath, HOD Dept. Sociology, Prof. Anup Dash and Prof. D.N. Jena for their personal and academic guidance throughout the research.

Finally, I record my boundless gratitude to numerous friends and family in addition to the individuals already mentioned. It is no exaggeration to say that without them there would be no thesis. With some I had the opportunity to share enthusiasm and curiosity, some provided inspiration, moral support and unconditional optimism, while others kept on inquiring about the progress of the research and its practical purpose. Some may not be aware of their role. I will gladly explain and of some I do not even know their name. Special thanks to Mr. Job Zachariah, Chief, UNICEF Office for Jharkhand, Ms Jeroo Master, Chief, UNICEF Office for Assam for their kind support. I could not have finished this thesis without their assistance and encouragement.

Last, but not least, I would like to thank my wife Pinky, for her love, patience, and understanding. She allowed me to spend most of the time on this thesis. For the past one year, she has been kept on reminding me to finish it. Also my brother and his wife have given me their unequivocal support from distance throughout, as always, for which my mere expression of thanks likewise does not suffice. The thesis is dedicated to my parents Mr Ananta Krishna Roy and Mrs Manjulata Roy for whom his son's journey through economics might have been a source of a little pride and much amusement.
