ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This research work "Commercial Banking in India During the Era of Reforms - A Case Study of Corporation Bank" is prepared by me as a part of the requirements of my Ph.D in Economics of Mangalore University. It is based on both the primary and secondary sources. Many persons and institutions have made this work possible to whom I owe my gratitude.

I express heartfelt gratitude to my guide Dr. G. V. Joshi, Professor, Department of Studies and Research in Economics, Mangalore University, for his valuable guidance, encouragement and support without which it would not have been possible to complete this research work.

I am deeply grateful to the executives and officials of Corporation Bank, for encouraging me to undertake this research work and for their valuable viewpoints. My thanks are due to Sri K. Ramamoorthy, Sri R. S. Hugar, former Chairmen of Corporation Bank and Sri K. R. Shenoy, former Executive Director of the Bank whom I interviewed for this work. Their suggestions and comments were very valuable to firm up my findings. My special respectful thanks are due to Sri K. Chenan Varghese, immediate former Chairman and Managing Director of Corporation Bank, who provided great insight into the subject during various interactions.

I sincerely thank all the respondents of my questionnaire who provided valuable inputs through their replies. Their views were very useful in generalising the banks' customers' views.

I remain grateful to the Chief Librarian of Indira Gandhi Institute of Development and Research, Mumbai, Librarian of Mangalore University and Librarians of Bankers' Training College, Indian Institute of Banking and Finance, and Indian Banks' Association—all from Mumbai.
I am thankful to Sri H.S Srinivasan, my colleague, whose help during data analysis was of immense value. I thank Prof. C.S.Sheth for going through this thesis carefully and offering his comments.

I am grateful to Smt.Vijaya, my wife who shared my ambition at this age and joyfully tolerated my time commitment for the thesis.
