ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The mere mention of the words "Tax" and "Taxable Amount" is sufficient to send an instant shiver down the spine of a taxpayer for a moment. In Central Excise, a complex psychological process of decision making for valuation of excisable goods precedes the levy of actual tax or duty. There was no dearth of studies pertaining to 'decision making for making, buying-selling, maintaining or marketing etc. of tangible and intangible goods and ideas, but there was not much work on decision making for valuation of excisable goods for the purpose of levy of excise duty. With this idea in mind, the destiny took me to a trio, for whom I feel the words alone are no tribute or are really insufficient to express my sincere gratitude towards their indispensable individual roles. Whereas the present work grew-up under the able guidance and supervision of Dr. H.J. Ghosh Roy, Reader, Institute of Management Studies & Research (IMSAR), Maharshi Dayanand University, Rohtak after it was assayed by Sh. O.P. Goyal, the then Professor and Dean, IMSAR, now Registrar, Guru Gobind Singh Inderprastha University, New Delhi. Dr. Rajbir Singh, Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology, M.D. University, Rohtak had not only sown the seeds but closely nurtured it indeed. Without their active support and able guidance the work could not have seen the ray of light.

Poonam, my wife, is the person who kept the zeal and spirit alive in me for so long for this work by untiringly motivating me to accomplish this goal. My Children, specially Meghna, never shirked to provide me required assistance in finishing all ministerial functions pertaining to this work.
Sewa Singh, now Inspector, Central Excise Commissionerate, Rohtak never hesitated to align and shine the drafts of each document, as many times as I required. Therefore, I owe him and to all my sincere friends many, many thanks not in words alone but by an intense feel also.

I am totally overwhelmed with deep gratitude towards all my colleagues, at senior levels and junior levels, and look forward for appropriate expressions to record my thanks to all of them, for they could spare their precious time to provide me the necessary informations with great courage, fairness and boldness. I also feel indebted to all those colleagues whom, I feel, I failed to motivate or persue in the style of their liking, to indebted me with the information pertaining to them for this work. Infact their attitude provided others the necessary impetus to lend me a real helping hand.

(O. P. DUHAN)
OM PARKASH DUHAN

12.01.05