ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis is the outcome of an interdisciplinary research on “A Comparative Study of the Human Rights Provisions in the International Bill of Human Rights (IBR) and the Constitution of India” under the supervision of Dr. Tmt. Indhrani Sridharan, M.A., Ph.D., Former Principal, Professor and Head of the Department of History, Ethiraj College for Women, Chennai 600008.

At the outset I would like to place on record my deep sense of gratitude and appreciation to my Supervisor and Guide Dr. Tmt. Indhrani Sridharan, who motivated me to take up this topic and also guided me through the various stages of research and writing, offering me constant advice and encouragement and in instilling in me the confidence to complete this research work.

I express my gratitude to the Chairman, Principal and all the member of the Managing Committee of the Ethiraj College for Women (Autonomous), Chennai and the Head and Faculty of the Department of History and my colleagues in the Department of Human Rights and Duties Education, for the encouragement and support I have received in pursuing my research.

I would like to place on record my sincere thanks and appreciation to the various institutions and agencies that have supported my research, in particular, the University Grants Commission, New Delhi for having appointed me to serve in the Post Graduate Department of Human Rights and Duties Education in Ethiraj College which in turn helped fuel the inspiration to pursue this research, the Department of Legal Studies, University of Madras, National Institute of Human Rights, National Law School of India University (NLSIU), Bangalore, Libraries of the High Court of Madras, NHRC Library in New Delhi, Libraries of NLSIU, Bangalore and Ethiraj College, Chennai, where I teach. I am highly indebted to all authors and experts whose work proved to be very useful in my research study on this subject.
At a very personal level I need to acknowledge those wonderful people without whom I could never have pulled it through: my husband and children who put up with my long hours of writing and keying in data and my friend Usha who came to my aid every time I struggled before the computer.

I would be failing in my duty, if I did not acknowledge my dear departed parents and my late mother in law, whose unstinting support and belief in my capacity to carve a niche for myself, enabled me to emerge from the role of a home maker, to also becoming a lawyer and teacher and now a researcher!

Above all, I thank God for enabling me to carry out this research.
