BIBLIOGRAPHY

15. Christian Friedrich Schonbein (Swiss-German chemist) was first used the term geochemistry in 1838.

16. Department of Mines and Geology, Mysore, and the values are determined and shown here in mg/l.

58. Lattman and Parizid, 1964; Relationship between fracture traces and occurance of GW in carbonate rocks. J. hydrology.2(2):73-91

79. Obi Reddy el al., 2000; Sarkar et al., 2001; SubbaRao et al, 2001; SrinivasVittala et al., 2005). The most widely used GIS model is known as DRASTIC, named for the seven factors considered in the model (Aller et al, 1985) developed in the United States Environmental Protection Agency (USGS, 1999).

97. 1. Rana Chatterjee* and Raja Ram Purohit, general article, current science, vol. 96, no. 12, 25 june 2009 central groundwater board (CGWB) and Department of Mines and Geology (DMG), Government of Karnataka, Has been jointly published the report on “Dynamic groundwater resources of Karnataka as on March 2004”.

      perth Anboy, New Jersey, Bulletin of the Geological Society of America, 67, 597-646.

113. Schumm SA., 1961.Sediment sources and drainage basin characteristics in upper 198.

114. Siddaraju (1992), Siddaraju, M.C., Thammegowda, Narayan M., and SiddalingaSwamy B.M., 1997.Evaluation of groundwater potential of Kattemalavadi watersheds in parts of Hunsur, K.R. Nagar and PeriyapatnaTaluks of Mysore District. Groundwater Studies, Department of Mines and Geology, Bangalore.

      National Geographical Jour. Of India, 43 (1), pp 31-43.

      South Mirzapur Region, Utter Pradesh., Geographical Review of India., V1.56N0.4.

      to 229.

118. Sharma, S.N.N., 1982. Hydrogeological investigations in Varada basin – A subtributary to Krishna river, Karnataka, Unpublished Ph.D., Thesis University of Mysore, 125 p.

119. Sharna and Jugran, 1992; Chatterjee and Bhattacharya, 1995; Tiwari and Rai, 1996; Ravindran, 1997).

135. Strahler (1957): Quantitative analysis of watershed geomorphology, Transactions, American Geophysical union vol. 38, No.6 pg. 918-920.

152. William Morris Davis (1895-1899); The text book of principle of Geomorhology.
