ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work has grown out of my interest while serving in a college at Jaigaon under Jalpaiguri district. During my stay there for almost nine years, the only major industry being the tea in this region, raised my inquisitiveness that how an industry established during the colonial rule could entirely change the scenario of a region. I am especially indebted to my guide, Dr Subhasis Biswas, Associate Professor in History, Jadavpur University, who encouraged me to undertake the research work and without whom this work would not have been possible.

During the period of my research I am indebted to many people and institutions and I am grateful to them. I am thankful to Dr A.P. Mukherjee of Kilkott Tea Garden who helped me in providing links with the managers of other tea gardens. I owe my gratefulness to number of managers of tea gardens who provided me time and lots of important information during my survey of tea gardens. I must make particular mention of Mr T.R. Peck of Baradigha Tea Garden, Mr Sashidhar Prasad of Patharjhora Tea Estate, Mr Suresh Jain of Dalmore Tea Estate, Mr Sanjay Gurtoo of Birpara Tea Garden under Duncans, Mr A.K. Roy of Kilkott Tea Garden under Duncans and Mr S.K. Babidi who all provided me all the relevant information required to perform my research work. I am also indebted to Mr P.K. Bhattacharya, Secretary of Dooars Branch of the Indian Tea Association, Binnaguri, who provided me access to very old documents and records available at the office.
I am also grateful to the management and staff of several institutions for providing access to source materials: the Indian Tea Planters Association, West Bengal State Archives, National Library, Calcutta, Centre for Social Sciences, Calcutta, Jalpaiguri District Library and Seventh Edward Memorial Additional District Library, Alipurduar, and North Bengal University Library.

I am also thankful to few of my colleagues at Nani Bhattacharyya Smarak Mahavidyalaya, Jaigaon, Jalpaiguri, especially to Ananda Kujur, Sri Pradip Kumar Barman and Sudha Biswakarma for providing me certain relevant information about my research work.

Finally, I would like to thank all the members of my family for providing continuous support to conduct my research work smoothly. I am really thankful to my father, Sri Tapas Kumar Majumdar, who had been my inspiration to finish my research work within my allotted time and who had always helped me in many small ways in performing this research work. My work would not have been completed without the unflagging support, understanding and encouragement of my mother Smt Sima Majumdar and my little daughter Sharanya Maji. I am also thankful to my husband, Sri Prasun Kumar Maji who other than supporting me to conduct this research also helped me in collecting and processing some of my materials, related to my research work. I could only hope whether I could have done justice to them.

Sukanya Majumdar,
Assistant Professor
