Acknowledgements

First and foremost, I would like to thank the almighty God for bestowing me this opportunity and also for blessing me, protecting me and helping me. Without him I could not have lived to reach this point in my life.

This dissertation would not have been completed without the direct and indirect help and cooperation of many individuals. Undoubtedly, the greatest contribution was from my supervisor, Dr. Rachana Dubey, to whom I propose my most sincere thanks and appreciation. Her encouragement and guidance has been instrumental in helping me to overcome all obstacles during my doctoral study. I am deeply grateful to Dr. Roshan Kazi, his vast experience in research methodology and data analysis laid a strong foundation for this study and who also has been generous enough to give his valuable remarks on the whole thesis.

I am extremely grateful to the software organisations, their project managers and team members who participated in the survey. I am also overwhelmed by the cooperation extended to me by the senior/delivery managers of these organisations who not only spent their considerable time and effort in persuading their software professionals to participate in the survey but also provided their insight into the nature of software project leadership.

My heartfelt gratitude to the management of Padmashree Dr. D.Y. Patil Institute of Management Studies, Akurdi, particularly to the Executive Director, Wg Cdr P V C Patil (Retd.) for his constant motivation and support throughout my journey. I am also grateful to the institute for sponsoring me to various national and international conferences and faculty development programmes which became a stepping-stone towards my success. My deepest appreciation to Dr. J.G. Patil for his help and guidance which gave a kick-start to this journey and also to my mentor Prof. D.R. Karnure, whose uplift and invaluable advice can beat any kind of qualms in your mind. I am also indebted to Prof. Sibi Abraham for his kind help and splendid coordination.

Last but not the least, I owe my profound appreciation to all my family members, friends, colleagues and well-wishers for offering me their enormous support and encouragement.
