I owe a pile of thanks for the comprehensive support, affection and cooperation that I received during the course of this research work ultimately resulting in the present study. The research would not have been possible without the help of those who contributed to the development of my knowledge and the progress of the work.

First and foremost, I pay my sincere obeisance to God, the Almighty, to have bestowed upon me the light, courage, inspiration, and zeal. I express the deepest gratitude to my guide, Dr. Prakash Joshi, for his insightful and constructive guidance throughout the study. His ideological support and intellectual help have gone deep into making this study worth it is. The practical advice and continuous encouragement extended by him have helped to focus and enrich my ideas and shape the study. The study has benefitted immensely by his valuable suggestions and vast knowledge. He kept on guiding me even during his stay at the City University of New York, USA, where he taught as a Fulbright Visiting Professor.

My thanks are due to the staff of American Center, New Delhi for the constant co-operation that I received from them. A good part of the secondary sources for this study was availed from the American Centre Libraries at New Delhi, Chennai and Mumbai. I specially thank the library staff at these libraries for their promptness. I thank the Librarian and the library staff of Banasthali University, Banasthali, for their help and support.

I record my indebtedness to Professor Aditya Shastri, the Vice Chancellor of Banasthali University for Women, and Professor S. Pal Malhotra, Dean of Humanities and Head of the Department, English and Modern European Languages, Banasthali
University, for being kind in various ways. I express my thanks to all the colleagues of all the Government Colleges where I have worked for the various ways in which they helped me.

I am obliged to Mrs. Namita Joshi, my mentor outside the study, for her affection and blessings whenever I needed. I owe my sincere gratitude to the blessings and untiring assistance of my Nanima, Mrs. Malti Saraswat and Mamiji, Mrs. Simpy Saraswat in helping me to complete the work.

I sincerely acknowledge the blessings of my grandparents and the parental figures, Mr. S.P. Saraswat, and Mrs. Snehlata Saraswat. I fall short of words to express a deep sense of gratitude to my father, Mr. C.B. Goswami and my mother, Mrs. Ena Goswami for being sources of inspiration and support in every possible way throughout -- ever since my school days in general and during this research work in particular. Special thanks to my brothers and all relatives.

Finally, I express heart-felt thanks to Dr. Aseem Saraswat, my husband, and Rushil, my son who have been constant sources of unconditional support, love, concern and strength.

Date: Madhuri Goswami