The Monetary aspects of the inter-war economy has been a long neglected field, this project will, I hope, help towards filling this gap.

A dissertation that has spent many years, and taken me through three cities, five libraries, and two archives could not have been accomplished without the help of very many people whose goodwill I am extremely grateful for. The staff of the Nehru Memorial Library, the National Archives of India have been very helpful as has Mr. Majumdar of the Ficci Library, and Mr. Thusu of the R.B.I. Library in Bombay. Without their assistance this project would have taken a lot longer than it already has. I thank the University Grants Commission for the financial assistance and a very special mention to Mr. Baweja who has typed this thesis with great patience and perseverance.

My entire perspective in history I owe to those who taught me in my formative years at St. Stephens and at the Jawaharlal Nehru University. Many friends have helped me with the preparation of the final draft, in particular, I would like to thank Robi Chatterji, Yogi, Rakesh Sharma, Aditya, Mridula Mukherji, Madhavan Palat and Rana Behl, they all know how I appreciated their help. Among my teachers at the Jawaharlal Nehru University, I want to express my gratitude to Professor Bipan Chandra.
Finally, I owe a very special debt to my Supervisor, Professor Sabyasachi Bhattacharya whose criticism, constant guidance and advice have been of invaluable help to me. Of course, I must mention that the arrival of my wife guaranteed the departure of this thesis from my table to the faculty office.
